but its summer schools draw many persons of other communions than the historic Society of Friends.

England has had a most interesting case of college "Jim the Penman," a man who, after being given the highest academic training his country could give, deliberately became one of her most remarkable outlaws. Bank managers and cashiers throughout Britain are now relieved to know that the "King of the Forgers" has just been "put away" for ten years. This redoubtable criminal is Gerald Kennaway, son of a leading West Country family which gave many worthy servants to the State, went to a great public school and from there to Cambridge university. His scholastic record was excellent, almost brilliant, and scores of well-known Englishmen, barristers, stock brokers and officers, were proud to call him friend in their university days. So expert was Kennaway as a forger that criminals came to him from all parts of Great Britain to engage his services for the fabrication of signatures.

Yale men from all sections of the country are planning to attend the Yale pageant, which is to be presented in the Yale Bowl as a part of the Yale-New Haven bicentennial, Saturday, October 21. The pageant will be a big affair and more than 7,000 students, school children and townspeople will participate. It is expected that an audience of 60,000 will witness the pageant, which will visualize every step of Yale's progress during the past 200 years. Its purpose will be to commemorate the moving of Yale College from Saybrook to New Haven in 1716.

Dr. J. A. Gathany, a Providence, R. I., instructor in history, has just tested the theory that in education we are over-weighted on the side of the actual and practical, and give too little attention to what is not "in contact with life." He had high school pupils write down the words and expressions which they were unable to explain and could not use accurately. A list of about 300 terms was thus obtained, among them being such words as alliance, autocracy, arbitration, bureaucracy, blockade, cosmopolitan, diplomatic, dreadnought, embargo, federal, city council, constituency, consular, franchise, government, internationalism, litigation, municipal, neutral, Pan-American, pacifist, paternalism, preparedness, referendum, States' rights, triple alliance, and ultimatum. The list was then submitted to several college students, two of whom are taking post-graduate courses in a New England college, and in each instance "the student has been frank enough to say that he and his colleagues would find it exceedingly hard, if not wholly impossible, to explain satisfactorily a large percentage of the expressions." In comment the investigator maintains that far from giving young people too much training along actual and material "contact with life," we are setting their faces toward the 16th century." He asks that the modern, up-to-date topics discussed in newspapers and magazines should have a place, however modest, on the curriculum. Young men leaving our institutions of learning with a precise acciph classes be installed wherever the IV and with knowledge of what is what is going on in the world are nothing, he says, but "educated ignoramuses."

Greatly increased school facilities are to be provided this fall for the instruction of foreign-born residents of the United States and especially for alien candidates for citizenship. It is the desire of the Bureau of Naturalization of the United States Department of Labor that public school authorities night classes be installed wherever the need exists for the education and Americanization of foreigners. During the last scholastic year the public school authorities of approximately 650 cities and towns in forty-four states of the Union were co-operating with the bureau in this branch of its educational activity. need exists for the education and received by the bureau, nearly 100 others have signified their intention of joining in the movement and all indications now point to a most gratifying record for the 1916-1917 school year. Night classes for teaching of English to foreigners have been maintained for years in most of the cosmopolitan centers of the United States, but the teaching of civics in these classes is a new departure.

Tomorrow the Royal presents one of the most superb motion picture productions of the year, "The Innocence of Ruth," a five-act Edison production presenting that bewitching little star, Viola Dana, with the finished actor, Edward Earle, in the two title roles.

"The Innocence of Ruth" is a play of rare charm, of wholesome power, of constant change and variety. A feature in which the petite winsomeness of the lovable Viola Dana is prettily brought forth, and offering a role which fits Edward Earle with admirable grace. It is an entertaining and full measure of thrill as well as charm, an unusual feature indeed, a play of pathos and passion.

Viola Dana is a refreshing Ruth, whether as child of youth, it is refreshing to see a screen character attempting a dance as an incident in the unfolding of a story and find one who really can dance instead of making a painful effort. In her role of the little innocent girl left with a guardian who would take advantage of her innocence she is indeed at pathetic picture and she adds to the illusion of the drama by her skill and grace in "the dance of the flowers" and as "Yama Yama."

Those patrons who are looking for a much needed relief from the sex dramas of the present day should not miss this enjoyable picture.

Seek Gold in Arizona River.

Prescott, Ariz., Sept. 5.—To determine what riches if any lie in the great potholes in the bed of the Haysayampa River, the California and Arizona Mining Company, which owns the New State, Elk and Perry quartz mines, is preparing to install powerful pumps to raise the gravel. Work on the project is to begin immediately. Several of the holes to be cleaned range from 50 to 100 feet in depth. Prospectors who have washed the gravel in the river bed have uniformly met with good returns and the company is proceeding on the theory that greater values will be recovered at depth.

Women To Decide Their Campaign Plan

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 5.—Delegates to the forty-eighth annual convention of the National American Women Suffrage Association, which opens tomorrow, have taken this famous resort by storm, and the headquarters are crowded with representative women, many of whom have journeyed from far distant points in the south and northwest and from the Pacific coast States. All of the national officials were on hand today for a preliminary meeting of the executive council. The feeling is prevalent that the convention is destined to be the "most momentous meeting in the entire history of the equal suffrage movement in this country."

Whether the association shall drop work on the Federal amendment, or concentrate on it and drop State work, or continue both State and Federal work, are the big issues to be decided by the convention. Equal franchise issues, in relation to the presidential campaign, will receive attention and the attitude of the association on several other questions will be determined. The association has planned the convention to crystallize the viewpoint of its members into a definite plan of action between now and election time. Officials and leading members of the association are enthusiastic in the belief that the developments of the convention will pave the way for what they confidently assert, is the inevitable establishment of national suffrage for women.

The convention will be called to order tomorrow morning in St. Paul's church. Mayor Bacharach will deliver an address of welcome, and then reports of committees will be read. In the afternoon there will be a three-cornered debate on the question of whether the association shall confine its future efforts to the Federal amendment, to State work, or to both. Miss Laura Clark, of Kentucky, and Miss Kate Gordon, of Louisiana, will speak for State legislation; Mrs. Ida Husted Harper and Mrs. Glendower Evans, of Massachusetts, will speak for the Federal amendment, and Mrs. Raynond

Brown, of New York, and Miss Florence Allen, of Ohio, will advocate the policy of working along both lines as the association has been doing.

On Thursday the convention will be held in Nixon's Theater and the morning will be devoted to routine business. The feature of the afternoon session will be the presidential address of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt.

The proceedings of Thursday will conclude with the celebration of a "Dixie Evening" in Nixon's Theater. The special purpose will be to arouse interest in the suffrage cause among the women of the South and with this purpose in view all the speakers of the evening will be Southern women who will tell of the progress of the movement in their respective States. Mrs. T. T. Cotnam will speak for Arkansas; Mrs. Lila Mead Valentine for Virginia; Mrs. B. J. Cunningham for Texas; Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Smith for Kentucky; Mrs. Edward McGehee for Mississippi; Mrs. Gullford Dudley for Tennessee; and Mrs. Eugene Reilley for North Carolina.

Friday morning will be devoted to discussions of political, campaign and election policies and routine business. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw will preside over the evening session, which will be devoted to a discussion of "Why Women Need the Vote."

nel Roosevelt will not permit their being present, but the association officers are hopeful that President Wilson may find it possible to come to Atlantic City before the convention adjourns.
