DRAW AN AWFUL PICTURE OF IT

Young Canadian Soldiers Tell of The Shell Fire at Verdun.

(By Associated Press.) Headquarters of the British Army in France, Sept. 7.—The young Canadians in khaki playing baseball in a Belgian pasture could tell you what the shell fire at Verdun was like.

Mud-stained, blood-stained, they had come away from the bloody piles of dirt which had been their trenches and after a long sleep they had wondered why they were alive and started to play baseball to pass the time till they should go into the trenches again.

The Germans could arrange their guns in a fan-shape around it as they could at Verdun; and they did. When their guns began to speak the British guns spoke back; and even the old inhabitants of the Ypres salient agreed that it was the worst ever.

But the officer inside the farmhouse sitting at the farmer's dining room table could tell all about it—his small part of it. He and his men had been in and out of the trenches on their shifts till they were quite used to the monotony of the trench life and the daily wastage.

They could not fire back at those guns thousands of yards away with their rifles. No one was showing his head in the German trench opposite. If a man leaned over a section of parapet remaining to fire he and it might be blown away by another shell.

Five point mines (that new 5.9-inch German shell), "whiz-bangs," trench-mortar shells and "Silent Lizzy's" (a naval gun shell of high velocity which is not heard coming until it bursts).

Anybody with any experience at the front would know. At any time either side wants to concentrate its artillery on a certain frontage of trench that frontage is bound to go down; and the attacking side can rush its infantry in and take the debris. The difficulty is to hold it.

Nature as well as the shells is against the soldier. If he digs a trench water fills it. Mostly he must depend on sandbags—roots and walls of sandbags. He cannot dig cellars twenty feet under the earth and crawl into them when the "cloudbursts of hell" descends as in hilly and mountainous country.

Another Omission. With all the rest that Hughes isn't saying, you notice that he isn't saying he will not replace Democrats with Republicans if elected.—Buffalo Enquirer.

WOMEN ARE SUICIDES BY LEAPS OUT WINDOWS.

New York, Sept. 7.—Two young women chose to commit suicide Tuesday by leaping from windows high above the street.

A young woman of attractive appearance went into the Hotel Ansonia at Broadway and Seventy-fourth street Tuesday morning. She was dazed for a time along the quiet corridors upstairs.

She was Miss Irene Landis, 24 years old, who had been boarding at Evergreen Cottage, Far Rockaway. Her husband, Abraham Richard Landis, a salesman for the Central Belling Company, of No. 151 Lafayette street, said he did not know why his wife should have leaped to death or why she should have gone into the Ansonia.

Her brother, Henry Nathan, said she recently had suffered from a nervous breakdown. She leaves a five-year-old daughter, Irene.

SPLENDID PAPER ON INFANTILE PARALYSIS

The following article on "Nature and Prevention of Infantile Paralysis" is taken from the September number of The American Journal of Clinical Medicine.

Infantile paralysis probably has afflicted human flesh for many centuries. The disease was recognized as a distinct malady by the German observer von Heine, who published a paper in 1840 describing this form as one form of paralysis.

Infantile paralysis, or poliomyelitis, as it is called in scientific language, is an acute infectious disease. The contagious agent lives in the mucous membrane which lines the nose and mouth in the gray substance of the spinal cord, and possibly elsewhere in the body.

There is no known way to explain the so-called sporadic cases of infantile paralysis, that is, the scattering simple cases, except on the assumption of healthy persons who act as carriers of the disease.

When an epidemic of infantile paralysis appears, children can be protected by keeping them safe at home, and by regarding with suspicion every person or thing that comes on the premises.
