COTTON LETTER. New York, Oct. 16.—An exceptionally strong Liverpool caused high prices in the market this morning. We are advised, however, by one of our reliable correspondents in North Carolina that Texas factors are offering cotton to the Carolina mills at prices lower than can be offered by local dealers. This statement was startling to us, but it followed by any large movement of this kind will have a serious effect upon the market as it distinctly shows that there is not the demand for export purposes that we have trained ourselves to expect. There is no question about a splendid textile business going on in this country, due to our supplying a number of markets that Europe previously controlled. The great question is what will we export, for without the markets that we are filling, what will Europe need, and if Texas can offer cotton or is offering cotton to domestic spinners, as reported to us, it will largely be an answer to the export question.

Chapter of Accidents. Altoona, Pa., Oct. 16.—A chapter of correlated accidents is told by Henry Weaver, a Bald Eagle Valley farmer, in Tyrone. Weaver says he decided to pick some pears from a large tree one Sunday. The limb broke and in his descent he passed through the roof of a hog pen. He fell on the back of a fat porker, which was so badly injured that it died.

QUARREL BETWEEN STATES. (Philadelphia Record.) Virginia's quarrel with the daughter state wrenched from her by the Caesarian operation comes up once more to remind the world how long such a disagreement may live. As a matter of fact, this question of a few million dollars between the two states once one, although now half a century old, has not persisted so long as some other interstate quarrels. Hardly any two neighboring states of the Union have escaped such disagreements, usually boundary questions involving territorial claims and matters of jurisdiction and sovereignty.

Other such questions arose in the West and the South and Maryland once made a claim that, had it been successfully enforced, would have made West Virginia a state of two separate parts, one isolated from the other by intervening territory not within West Virginia's jurisdiction. Courts and commissions have been busy dealing with such interstate questions from the very foundation of the Union, and many such quarrels were inherited from Colonial days.

Two of the oldest of these quarrels were those between Delaware and her neighbors, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. These two questions came down from Colonial times and were both related to the most famous boundary of the Western Hemisphere, Mason and Dixon's line. The beginnings of the quarrel between Pennsylvania and Delaware preceded the coming of William Penn by a full generation, for long before he accepted the grant of Pennsylvania in payment of a royal debt, the early settlers of his future principality and the Catholic adherents of Lord Baltimore were warring over the boundary that we now call Mason and Dixon's line.

THEATRE. While the general run of Victoria shows have been interspersed with bright vaudeville numbers, the management has gone one better this week and booked in an all-vaudeville bill of five bright and startling acts. Zarrow's Variety Review is the aggregation, and it consists of five top-line vaudeville acts, each one of which can easily be recognized as high-class and worth the very tip-top prices. Charlotte is now playing vaudeville exclusively at prices ranging to a half dollar admission, and the assertion is ventured that the show at the Victoria this week will be fully up to the standard of those expensive shows being put on in Charlotte. Featured with the Variety Review is the famous Lynch Trio, the most famous juvenile trio ever in tour in this territory, and which is well known throughout the whole country. Presenting songs, dances, monologue, dialogue and harmony singing, this act alone will be worth the price of admission. Then comes Hill and Edmunds, in a series of Irish sayings, comedy songs and gags, a comedy act that is sure to go over big. Musical Al Nuttle is probably another one of the strongest attractions, offering a wide variety of musical instruments filling the full stage, and manipulating them presenting popular and classic attractions. He is heralded as the original Musical Nut. Snyder and Vaughn, in a variety of black and tan comedy sketches, singing and dancing, will also go over big, and Miss Bessie Knowles, "The Golden Girl With the Golden Voice," will prove another very pleasing act. The usual free courtesy to ladies will be extended tonight only.

PARKER SPOKE IN RALEIGH

Republican Nominee Charged Wilson With Teaching Cowardice. Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 16.—John J. Parker, Republican candidate for attorney general, spoke in the Court House Friday night to a very good Republican crowd, which heard one of the best speeches made to Republicans this year. Mr. Parker is next to one of the youngest men running on either ticket, but he has had a reputation as an orator since he went to the University and distinguished himself in the debates. His speech Friday night went an hour and fifty-one minutes and he carried state and national issues to a finish. He centered his attack upon the "free trade" and the foreign policy of the national administration, giving the Adams bill a side-swipe which sufficed very satisfactorily in this unionized town. For protection, he was content to say that everybody in North Carolina is for it and that the issue need not be debated. "Four years ago a great Democrat charged that Senator Simmons had strayed from the Democratic fold and that the senator had protectionized the state. I think he succeeded in proving it," Mr. Parker said, "but Mr. Kitchin was overwhelmingly defeated." As for the foreign policy he declared that he does not believe a Democrat lives who will in private or upon the public platform defend the Wilson policy. "I don't believe there is a Democrat who in his heart of hearts is not ashamed of his party's record," he declared. The speaker quoted Colonel Roosevelt and Mr. Hughes as authority for the statement that when Wilson issued the first "strict accountability" pronouncement, the President called Ambassador Dumba in and told the Austrian representative that the message was for home consumption and not to be rigorously interpreted. "Then the Lusitania sunk," he said.

That fashionable Mrs. Jones has sued for divorce. What's the charge against her husband? Neglect of her bulldog and failure to support the same, I believe.—Exchange.

President Wilson has never denied these charges. In an hour of peril he was teaching us lessons of cowardice and selfishness and there is no man or set of men greater enemies to the race than these.

Mr. Parker was thoroughly ashamed of the Adams bill and he declared that labor union sympathizers, as he is, the labor men will themselves in time to come repudiate legislation forced as this was. He did not think the eight-hour law, which he favors, entered into it at all and he was confident that the courts will declare it unconstitutional. He regarded it as most evil in its tendency.

Mr. Parker divided his speech equally on state and national issues and rapped the whole state administration the last 50 minutes. He used Clarence Poe to prove that the school system which Attorney General Bickett proposes so is unworthy of North Carolina and is inferior to "heathen Japan." Mr. Parker declined to discuss 16-year issues, but did declare that the 1897 legislative legislation on the statute books that the state has, more than the Democratic legislatures did. He compared the cost of the state administrations and made even the Democrats laugh when he said that when "Old Dan Russell" was given $1,800 to say on the mansion and only $3,000 salary and the Democrats charged him with extravagance, but Governor Craig has twice as big an allowance for executive service and $2,000 more salary, besides the $4,200 for keeping up the mansion.

The colt leaped over another fence and collided with a barbed-wire fence, lacerating its legs and breast. When the veterinarian came next day to sew up the cuts he ran over Weaver's dog, which had to be shot.

American Missionary Association. Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 16.—With the meeting of the American Missionary Association in annual session here tomorrow, leaders in Congregational affairs are to enter upon the second stage of efforts for a new Congregationalism in America. For upwards of a decade they have been perfecting their preliminary plans, and at the meeting about to begin arrangements will be perfected for putting these plans into practical operation. President Henry Churchill King, of Oberlin College, who is also president of the association, will be on hand to further the association's plans, and to make two of the principal addresses. President Vincent, of the University of Minnesota, and a number of other men of note, also are on the program.

Trial in Margaret Ward Case. Boston, Mass., Oct. 16.—More than half a dozen men and women, among them a former member of the Massachusetts legislature, were arraigned in the Superior Criminal Court today for trial in connection with the Margaret Ward case. The body of the Ward girl was found in an automobile at Salem early one morning several months ago. In the car were five men, and an examination of the young woman's body disclosed that she had died after an illegal operation had been performed.

BIG LINE NAGS AT ATLANTA. Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 16.—The three months' campaign of the Grand Circuit during which the kings and queens of the trotting and pacing world have entered and contested for stakes and purses worth more than half a million dollars, will be brought to a close with the meeting inaugurated at the State fair grounds track here today. Never before has the big circuit conducted a meeting so far South and the results of the experiment will be watched closely by all followers of the turf. The stables at the local track are filled with fast horses and the association officials confidently predict a week of excellent sport.
