PRESIDENT BLAZES AWAY AT THE ENEMY IN HIS LAST SPEECH.

"When I see this unblushing, this impudent attempt to reinstate these forces without any concealment of any kind, do you wonder that I would like to get out again and denounce the whole crowd as I know them?"

"It is delightful to fight the things that are wrong. It is delightful to hit something that is worth hitting and destroying. The only thing that is disappointing in contests of this sort is that these fellows dodge and will not get hit. They sneak and will not reveal their purpose. They have no sand or stomach for the fight in the open and they erect things that look like bulwarks, but are mere pretenses.

"But, after all, my fellow-citizens, the thing that is being attempted in New Jersey is only part of what is being attempted in the United States and being attempted in the United States with more and more transparency of purpose.

"Look how the campaign has gone. First of all, an attempt to set up some kind of handsome issue, not a very interesting attempt, because the issue was a new one every week. As soon as you approach what was said to be the issue, it seemed to fade and disappear and there was nothing for you to grasp or grapple.

"And after finding that the search for an issue was in vain, they came down once more to the only thing they have in recent years ever known how to talk about and that was the protective tariff.

"They know perfectly well that all the pretenses about the protective tariff have been torn away by the oratory of Democratic speakers, but by the patent demonstration of fact. They know that the workmen of this country may have been deceived for a little while, but they cannot be deceived all the time. They know just as well as we know that the industries in which the highest protection was given paid the lowest wages and they know that the highest wages were paid in the least protected industries. That is a matter of record.

"Not only that they know that in some of the most highly protected industries the conditions under which the laboring people lived were a disgrace to our civilization. They know that men and women were ground just as long as they could be ground and that these gentlemen who profess American patriotic feeling for the American laborer were most eager to import laborers from abroad

FORECLOSURE SALE.

By virtue and in pursuance of the power of sale contained in a mortgage made by Ed. Nixon and wife to the Wilmington Homestead and Loan Association, recorded in Book 72, page 69, of the records of New Hanover County, the undersigned will sell, to the highest bidder, at public auction, for cash, at the Court House door in Wilmington, N. C., on Friday, the 24th day of November, 1916 at twelve o'clock m., the following described property in said city:

Beginning at a point in the western line of 7th street 196 feet south of the southern line of Dawson street; runs thence south along 7th street 35 feet; thence westwardly parallel with Dawson street 165 feet; thence north parallel with 7th street 35 feet; thence eastwardly parallel with Dawson street 165 feet to the beginning, and being part of Lot 4, Block 26, WILMINGTON HOMESTEAD AND LOAN ASSOCIATION. and employ those who, because they did not know what America could afford, were willing to take what they could get.

"And now what do we witness? Having despaired of an issue, they are not only filling the country with alarms, but they are attempting coercion of these laborers. They imagine that these men are not their own masters and dare not vote as they think, and at last, I thank God, the American laborer is awake. He at last judges his friends by what they do and not by what they say. He knows that he has found friends because he has found men who will do the things that he has demanded should be done in justice and equity to him.

"Let them fill the air with alarms. The alarms are their own, not ours. They used to control the credit of the country; they now control nothing but the betting. So that I think as we look back upon this campaign—for we are now looking back upon it, and we hear now nothing but cries of distress as we look back—we can see a very heart-ending and encouraging thing. We can see the people at last asserting themselves by rejecting the old leadership under which they were so long astray and turning to do things for themselves.

"The difference between the Republican party and Democratic is this:

"The Republican party offers them masters; we offer them comrades and leaders. The Republican party offers to take care of them. We offer to go into the fight shoulder-to-shoulder with them to get their rights.

"The ranks are formed. The discipline is self-discipline. No man needs to guide them in their voting. They know what the issues are and in their minds they see those little coteries that used to govern the affairs of this country and control the treasury of the United States sitting in secret conference trying to determine how in the last days of the campaign, when no man will have an opportunity to answer them, they may repeat the deceptions by which they have been controlling the votes of American citizens.

"We are trying to reconstruct America along the lines of justice and equity which cut very much deeper than any party lines. Democrats are the only persons who have burning at their hearts the desire to see these things done. There are men without number in the ranks of the other party, even men who are allowing themselves to be misled and deceived, who want these things done. It was the duty of those who represented the Republican party, as it was our duty in this campaign, to expound the real heart of the social necessities and the political exigencies of America.

"Have they done that? Have they not merely said that though the right things had been done, no doubt they had been done by the wrong persons? What difference does it make who did them, whether they were good looking men or ugly men, whether they were wise men or unwise, whether they were schoolmasters or sages? If they were done and were the right things to do, every man ought to stand by and praise them.

"All that we have heard from our opponents has been that they believed in themselves. That is not what we wanted to know. Do they believe in us also? Do they believe that America by showing in her own place that she means what she says by herself can be counted upon to mean what she says about the world when the war is over?

"It amazes me that men calling themselves statesmen should discuss some of the things our opponents have been dwelling upon when the whole atmosphere of the world was lurid with the blaze of threatened trouble, men spreading tinder in this country when sparks without number were blowing from this terrible conflagration, men making party sport of unsettled questions, not settled ones; of present course of action, not past courses of action, seeking to make party capital out of things which, if not settled wisely, might bring this country at any moment into this world conflict which is devastating Europe.

"Is it not amazing, my fellow-citizens, to witness such effort for party advantage and does it not point for us this moral, that we are now in the presence of things which ought to make things fundamental (the only things we care about), which ought to make the just foundations of peace the things that we are seeking for rather than the accidental elements of peace; not searching for the detail, but searching for the heart purpose that is in the whole thing.

"The world will never be again what it has been. The United States will never again be what it has been.

"The United States was once in enjoyment of what we used to call splendid isolation. The 3,000 miles of Atlantic seemed to hold all European affairs at arm's length from us. The great spaces of the Pacific seemed to disclose no threat of influence upon our place.

"Now, from across the Atlantic and from across the Pacific we feel to the quick the influences which are affecting ourselves and in the meantime, whereas we used to be always in search of assistance and stimulation from out of other countries, always in search of the capital of other countries to assist our investments, depending upon foreign markets for the sale of our securities, we now have bought in more than 50 per cent of those securities, we have become not the debtors, but the creditors of the world, and the part that other nations used to play in promoting industries, which extended as wide as the world itself, we are playing the guiding part.

"We can determine to a large extent who is to be financed and who is not to be financed. That is the reason I say that the United States will never be again what it has been. So it does not suffice to look as some gentlemen are looking, beck over their shoulders, to suggest that we do again what we did when we were provincial and isolated and unconnected with the great forces of the world, for now we are in the great drift of humanity which is to determine the politics of every country in the world.

"With this outlook is it worth while to stop to think of party advantage? Is it worth stopping to think of how we have voted in the past? We are now going to vote, if we be men with eyes open that can see the world as those who wish to make a new America in a new world.

"My fellow-citizens, it is an unprecedented thing in the world that any nation in determining its foreign relations should be unselfish, and my ambition is to see America set the great example, not only a great example morally, but a great example intellectually.

"You cannot have good business out of a discontented population. You cannot have it out of a population, large portions of which feel they are not getting the square deal. The sources of business are in the hearts and energies of mankind. Now, similarly, you cannot get a great position in the world except out of a vital world. America cannot reap the harvest of her influence unless the soils of the world are kindly and genial and yield to her influence, and they will yield not to hatred, not to enmity, but to sympathy and cooperation and the love of only those things that are just and right.

"For my part I thank God that the era of the old guard has gone by. They never conceived or understood an unselfish purpose in their lives. They had as their motto, 'Enlightened selfishness.' The only thing that is enlightened is unselfishness. If I were merely sinister and wanted to fill my pockets as a business man I would be unselfish because I could make more money that way than any other way.

"My fellow-citizens, I feel rising in my pulse already, the inspiration and impulse which is to come not only to the United States, but to the world next Tuesday. I do not identify myself with this. To me has fallen the unspeakable good fortune of happening to be the spokesman of the American people at this critical and fateful time.

"I do not know what is wise. I cannot be sure that I judge right, but I am sure that my heart speaks the same thing that they wish their hearts to speak.

"In the days to come men will no longer wonder how America is going to work out her destiny, for she will have proclaimed to them that her destiny is not divided from the destiny of the world, that her purpose is justice and love of mankind."

The Seaboard Air Line

Is endeavoring to Co-operate with us—Here is an ad. appearing in a recent issue of the Manufacturers' Record and right in line with the constructive articles of Mr. Whitehead and Mr. Chadbourn regarding the Wood Pulp Industry.

Presenting the Claims of Wilmington, N. C.

For Woodworking industries, Wilmington presents a situation worthy of the most careful consideration of those engaged or about to engage in that business.

Already it is the center of a large territory for these plants, and they are successful—a matter worth consideration.

It is claimed that one hundred million feet of tupelo gum and other hard woods are within a radius of twenty-five miles, and even a greater amount beyond the twenty-five mile radius. The supply of raw material is therefore assured.

Other advantages are—abundance of labor at low wage scale, good living conditions for labor, good climatic conditions, favorable rates of transportation on raw and finished products.

These facts respecting Wilmington, presented by the Progressive Railway of the South, are without selfish motives, as those who know the transportation situation must testify, and is but in line with our policy to help create a systematic development of the Seaboard Southeast, today the Nation's undeveloped asset, and the opportunity for the progressive.
