

THEATRE.

All indications point to record-breaking crowds at the Victoria all this week, as the management has booked the biggest show that has ever played this theatre for Corn Show week.

Reilly's Globe Trotters, in the first place, is the biggest company which has ever played the Victoria, carrying an all-star aggregation of thirteen artists, also carrying their own musical director, wardrobe mistress, etc., after the manner of the big regular legitimate musical comedy companies.

At least four big and extraordinary feature drawing cards are included with Reilly's Globe Trotters, headed by the famous Empire Quartette, the best known bunch of harmony singers now on the road, with a long record of spectacular and successful appearances in the big time circuits. Ernest Linwood, the very best black-face comedian that has ever struck Wilmington, will be another strong drawing card, as Linwood is well known here, as well as in all parts of the country. Harold Paite, the base soloist, who was a Wilmington boy before he broke into the big time vaudeville circuits, has an enviable record, and Reilly's Globe Trotters were fortunate to get him for this season. Then Fred Kramer, one of the most famous Dutch comedy artists on the stage, will also come in for his share of the approval of the Victoria crowds.

best working chorus that has ever appeared in Wilmington, and it is by far the largest that has been seen at the Victoria.

The free privilege will be extended ladies tonight, under usual conditions, and those who desire seats for the first evening performance had best come early.

"The Immortal Flame."

Tomorrow the Royal presents one of the most vital problem dramas that has been filmed within the past two years, a marvelous production entitled, "The Immortal Flame," produced by Ivan Film Productions, and starring the greatest assemblage of dramatic talent ever seen in a photoplay of equal length anywhere, headed by that celebrated dramatic artiste Maude Fealey, supported by Paula Shay, "The Mary Garden of the Screen," a great Broadway cast, including James Cooley, Edna Luby and Willard Case.

"The Immortal Flame" is a five-reel screen epic written and directed by Ivan Abramson, "Filmdom's Master Craftsman," and has as its theme "the love that rules without a sword—the love that binds without a cord." "Love can neither be bought nor sold, the only price of love is love," shows this vital photoplay of heart throbs and pathos in which the different artists have cast aside all restraint and acted each scene with a feverish intensity.

Maude Fealey, playing a woman who enters into a loveless marriage in order to further the political ambitions of her father, is far and away the most striking character seen on the screen in recent months. Profiting by a long screen experience Miss Fealey acts every scene for all it is worth, and in the last reel gives an astounding exhibition of physical daring when, lightly clad, she wanders out on snow-covered Riverside Drive and enters the waters of the Hudson river. The picture closes with a glimpse of her body floating on the tide.

Booked at a heavy expense the Royal management will present this feature at regular prices, trusting that large crowds will make up for the low admission price.

CAPE FEAR APT'S. MAN SAYS HE IS 5 YEARS YOUNGER

J. S. Russ Learned Secret When Friends Allowed Him to Sample His Tanlac Bottle. Now He's Well and Happy.

"I found out how good Tanlac was from a friend by sampling several doses from his Tanlac bottle and, of course, got my own then. And, I'm glad I did, for I feel stronger and five years younger, already." The speaker was J. S. Russ, Chief Attendant at the Cape Fear Apartments, this city.

"Indigestion and constipation troubled me for the past two years," Mr. Russ continued. "I tried various remedies, but none of them seemed to help me at all. I found myself in a very run-down condition subject to dull headaches in the morning, with a bad taste in my mouth and no appetite. Of course, I was weak and felt bad. Almost everything I ate seemed to disagree with me, and, on eating only a few mouthfuls I would begin to swell, and my stomach felt as if I had eaten a peach. I also had dull, aching pains in my back, and didn't sleep well at all."

Here Mr. Russ smiled and added quickly: "What a difference now. My digestion is good, I am no longer troubled with gas pains or headaches. I sleep well, and am no longer constipated. I gladly recommend Tanlac, for it is the best remedy I ever saw, and I advise anyone troubled with indigestion to give it a trial."

Genuine Tanlac is sold in Wilmington exclusively at the Bellamy Drug Store, where its merits are explained daily to health seekers by the Tanlac Man; Acme, Acme Store Co.; Burgaw, C. L. Halstead; Southport, Watson's Pharmacy; Rocky Point, A. N. Rhodes & Co.; Supply, G. W. Kirby; New Bern, Brandham Drug Co.; Magnolia, W. J. Southall; Faison, Faison Drug Co.; Pembroke, G. W. Locklear; Snow Hill, J. T. H. Harper; Vineland, R. B. McRoy & Co.; Whiteville, J. A. McNeil & Son; Vernoia, G. W. Humpfrey. Each town has its Tanlac dealer.—Adv't.

Houston, Texas, Nov. 6.—Delegates from all parts of the South are arriving in Houston to attend the annual convention of the Southern Furniture and Warehousemen's Association. The convention sessions will continue three days and will be devoted to the consideration of a wide variety of subjects of interest and importance to the furniture trade.

WASHINGTON INTEREST—FIGHT OVER THE SOLDIER'S MONUMENT

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—The approach of election day has brought to Washington an almost Sabbath-like quiet. For several days the departments have been emptying themselves of voters and if the voters in the different States take as much interest in tomorrow's balloting as do the government officials and clerks, here there will be a large vote.

Scituate, Mass., Nov. 5.—Scituate is going to have a soldiers' monument to honor the memory of the men of this vicinity who fought for the Union, but at the present time it is very uncertain as to just what kind of a monument it will be, owing to the radical difference of opinion among the townspeople. The ultimate decision in the matter rests with the Plymouth county circuit court, to which tribunal the controversy has been referred by the warring factions. The committee appointed to select the design for the memorial consisted of Grand Army veterans and art experts. The veterans selected one design, while the art experts gave another design their preference. The Grand Army men, being in the minority, were overruled by the committee and an award was given to construct the monument according to the design approved by the art experts. The old soldiers then went to law and secured an injunction to restrain the award of the contract according to the design accepted by the committee. Now it has been left to the court to decide which of the two designs shall be accepted for the monument.

The civil service laws have been extended so much in recent years, however, that the exodus of government employees to the different States hardly will improve the chances of either party. Nearly all the government places in which the salary per annum is less than $3,000 are now covered by the civil service laws, and in some of the departments it is known that the number of Republicans holding office is considered in excess of the Democrats, notwithstanding that this is a Democratic administration.

REUNIONS AND HEART-BEATS
What is more wonderful than the reunion of old school-friends? Some how one lives the happy days all over again as they recall some incident marking an era in their school career.
Our "frat" had not had a reunion in years so Ethel and I decided to get the girls together for a day in the woods not far from my home.
I met them all at the railroad station in my machine, and how our tongues did wag during the ride home and the luncheon which followed in the conventional walls of my breakfast room, where mother and I had a luncheon served.
After lunch we started for the particular spot in the woods which had been chosen, arriving at the little brook about three in the afternoon.
Every incident of any account was called to the others' mind by some one, and we seldom allow the story to be finished, so eager were we to tell the incident uppermost in our own mind.
This reunion took place on a midsummer's day. So intent were all of us upon the conversation that we did not notice a peculiar rustling in the grass at our feet.
Suddenly Marge jumped to her feet screaming at the top of her lungs. "A snake! A snake!" she yelled, and there was a poor little snake peacefully crawling about at our feet, probably more frightened than we were. Even this incident did not dampen our ardor. After Ethel and I had thrown the snake on the other side of the brook by means of a stick, a somewhat long stick—the conversation proceeded as enthusiastically as before.
We were to have been home by six o'clock in order to have a late dinner before taking the girls to the station, but this did not happen. When I chanced to look at my wrist watch the hands pointed to after half-past six. Of course there was a general scramble to our feet and a hasty walk toward the house. Mother had ordered hot waffles for tea, and of course the batter could not be cooked until we appeared on the scene, so we washed and primped, tantalized by the delicious odor of the waffles cooking.
The girls did not catch the train they wished, but there was a late one and nobody minded. At the station we parted—the old friendships burning afresh in our hearts. You may rest assured we promised ourselves a reunion every three months, each girl taking turn at being hostess.
