Darting in and out about the glow- ings. ing statue, like some huge moth about a colossal candle, Ruth Law flew, rising and falling, revealing frequently to the watchers on shore and the surface of the waters the illuminated Statue of Liberty carried by her aeroplane.

The President and his party arrived at the Pennsylvania station at 3:18 o'clock this afternoon. They proceeded, with police escort, to the Eightieth street landing, North River, off which the Mayflower lay.

At 4 o'clock the Mayor's committee of two hundred, with a number of women, arrived at the same landing and went aboard the United States steamships San Francisco and Yankton. From the moment the President's yacht was bathed with bright white light from the gigantic Sperry searchlight, onward throughout the parade up the Golden Way to the Waldorf-Astoria, the President and his party were kept in the glare of the light.

At the Waldorf-Astoria, a dinner was served at 7:30 o'clock in celebration of the illumination of the Statue of Liberty. The President and Mrs. Wilson were the guests of honor.

Through the government representative in the United States, Ambassador Jules J. Jusserand, President Poincare, of France, delivered a message of congratulations@and good will to the people of America.

In the glow of the moving spotlight, provided by the broad beam from the Sperry light and by smaller searchlights by the score, the Mayflower moved down toward Bedloe's Island. With her were Mrs. Wilson, Ambassador Jusserand, Ambassador and Mrs. Gerard, Senator-elect Wm. M. Collier, Mayor Mitchel and Ralph Pulitzer.

The yacht was followed closely by the two warships bearing the committee of 200 and, their guests.
