The fighting has been while the enemy has paid dearly for his successes, the Italian losses also have been very heavy. An eye witness from the scene of operations gave the correspondent details of the extent and bloody nature of the carnage. Enemy reserves were poured in until the Italians were far outnumbered. They continued to struggle desperately, however, and in one case a small detachment of Bersaglieri met the shock of an entire Austrian regiment. Austrian Kaiserjaegers displayed unprecedented feocity, using stilettos as well as bayonets in hand-to-hand fighting. But the greatest single instance of heroism and loss was in the case of several detachments of Alpini, which held Monte Castelgomberto against overwhelming odds until surrounded completely. Thus encircled they made repeated charges, but the heavy surrounding lines held and the entire party was still on the mountain when the remainder of the Italian line fell back. In another case, one brigade of Bersaglieri lost a great number of officers and men in the same proportion. The extent of the enemy reserves is shown by their concentration in the average amount of a division for every kilometre. These divisions have been identified as the sixth, nineteenth, twenty-first, forty-fifth and fifty-second, in addition to others not identified, and a number of German battal-The school committeemen from ev- ions.
