Austin, April 7, 1889. I saw some buzzards on a tree, They were lean as lean could be. Says one of them to young Pete, "Give unto me some meat to eat!" "Hold," said Pete, "you just keep sti Until I reach the Gillum hill. I'll lay you out a noble steer, Euough to fill you, don't you fear, Or if you want an old black hog Just look for him in yonder bog." The Lewiston her whistle blew Where in the thick of piney wood The tallest of the pine trees stood. On the topmost limb they all did ligh CHAIRS, TABLES, BED ROOM | And waited through the dreary night. At early dawn, by break of day, They sent this message far away, To all the buzzards fir and near, "Come dine with us on noble steer. When you hear Pete't whistle blow TURES, CARPET & OILCLOTH | The feast is ready you shall know-Meet us on the Gillam hill, For Pete his promise will fulfill."

How many slain no one can tell-The road is strewn with horns and sich From Gillam's hill to Harrell's 'switch, And buzzards no more lank and lean On the Cashie road are ever seen. On Friday last the call went round And at the Lewiston's cheery sound All the buzzards of Bertie Roosted on a big pine tree, There they waited for the train That all the hogs and cows had slain of Watch and Clock repairing at short And when the train backed up the grade Oatman for their good had made, They did with one loud voice exclaim God bless young Pete and all his train!

FROM BUZZARDS ROOST, REPUBLICAN AUSTIN, April 13, 1889. What! ho! we've got another, Thanks unto the "man and brother," Who seated on the same old seat Jerks the lever held by Pete. Oh, buzzards blest are we indeed, For Tom will help us in our need. The buzzard's blessings be on his head Thanks to Luke, we still can sing, Long live our Tom and live our Jim.
