The Importance of Hiram

AS MAINE goes, so goes the nation," says unreliable legend. Maine went Democratic in 1914, and the nation elected Woodrow Wilson; but Maine didn't elect Wilson: California elected him.

Charles Evans Hughes, 1914's Republican candidate, was tactless enough to snub California's Hiram Johnson. Mr. Johnson spoke his mind, California echoed him, and swelled the chorus into victory for Woodrow Wilson.

Last week, Democratic candidate Franklin Delano Roosevelt went to California, won an ovation in San Francisco, another in Los Angeles, and most important of all, won the tacit indorsement of Hiram Johnson.

Said Mr. Johnson: "The attitude of Mr. Roosevelt is in sharp contrast with that which Mr. Hoover has maintained toward progressivism and progressive Republicans in California.

Roosevelt's triumphal tour through the West proves that he has to an extraordinary degree that quality without which no public executive can succeed—the ability to capture the imagination of the people.

Democrats rejoice that they carried Maine. Let them rejoice the more that their candidate carried Hiram Johnson.

More About Drowning

THE venerable editors of this journal (those phenomenal scribes who aged twenty years in a week) are in deep sympathy with the aches and plagues of senescence and wish to deal gently with their ancient brethren.

First, we find that we aren't capable of sustained attention. That is, we start reading something and by the time we've reached the last part, we've forgot what the first was all about.

Some of us got all excited and said in very vigorous terms that we didn't want to be drowned in sacks. Yes, that was it—drown us in sacks, the paper said.

"What a clean efficient government we might get if the young men—and great Scott, the young women, too—would kick out the old reprobates, the old spellbinders, the old nincompoops!

Now doesn't that beat the dickens? That editorial never said a word about drowning all the old men. It just said all the politicians over fifty years old, and reprobates, at that.

Looks as if maybe the boys would have been right if they HAD suggested drowning us. But they didn't. Why, the whippersnappers, they just sat back and let us tie ourselves up in our own sacks!

Safeguard Your Money

MACON county needs a bank in Franklin perhaps as much as it needs any one thing to relieve the depression locally. Yet, in the present arrangement, there is a factor of safety that should not be ignored.

What Franklin offers now is not properly a bank, but a clearing house. But deposits can be made in this bank, and will be probably as safe as in any bank in the world.

So many robberies have occurred recently that would have been impossible had the victims put their money in a bank that persons now accustomed to keeping large sums of money around the house should be warned.

The clearing house, unlike a bank, can't fail. Keep your money safe by depositing it.

More Drowning Protests

(Continued from page one) ed. Having recently been put in that category I wish to add my protest to those of the gentlemen whose years have not diminished their vigor, nor impaired their faculties; as is amply demonstrated in the merciless onslaughts which they made upon the youthful pair.

1.—It is not pleasant to be drowned. I know, because I was drowned once upon a time, down in the Old South Fork river, and the recollections of that experience are not pleasant.

2.—Young men are too serious. That is, they take themselves too seriously. Old men have reached that period of good sense which enables them to laugh at themselves.

3.—The conservatism of the old is necessary to balance the inexperienced enthusiasm of youth. Youth has energy, and follows its urges to go forward; but not always knowing where it is going.

4.—Let the old men enjoy what they have created. It can not be denied that the young folks of any generation live off of what the old one has created.

5.—What is needed, instead of getting rid of the old men, is to recreate filial respect. This is the only way to conserve the rich and ripe experience of men who have lived, and in living have discovered gems of truth, and worth untold value to the oncoming generation.

6.—There are not sacks enough to go around. 7.—Let the old men live and enjoy the evening of life. There is lots in this world to enjoy.

8.—We have songs in our hearts, memories which we cherish, and views which gladden our souls. Let live on in the twilight and dream over the old dreams, and look with fond appreciation and pride at the steady tramp of the glorious young men.

Your Farm - How to Make It Pay

Fat Content of Milk

WHILE dairymen ponder the cause of variation in the butterfat content of milk from the same breed of cows and between individual cows of the same breed, investigation shows there are at least ten different factors associated in this cause.

"When we consider the single milkings of individual cows, the butterfat content varies from about two per cent to 10 per cent," says Fred M. Haig, associate professor of dairying at State College.

In addition to these four influences, Mr. Haig finds the difference in time between milkings has some effect and he urges milking at regular intervals for best results.

The last milk drawn from the udder is richer than the first few streams and shows why a cow should be thoroughly stripped. A cow in good flesh will produce more milk and fat than a thin one.

A dairy cow needs to be fed liberally to get the highest test of fat but this feed should be balanced. Drought will lessen the percent of fat in milk and finally turning in pasture will have effect on the fat content only when the pasture is in poor condition.

The Farmer's Question Box

Timely Questions Answered by N. C. State College Experts

Question:—When and how should I apply paradichlorobenzene for the control of peach tree borers?

Answer: The chemical should be applied between September 25 and October 10 for best results. Be careful, however, in the size of the application. For four to five year old trees three-quarters of an ounce is sufficient.

Question: What can I plant now to have greens during the fall and winter?

Answer: Two of the most popular greens for fall and winter other than collards and turnips are kale and spinach. Both should be planted at this time and replanted about the first of October.

Catawba county farmers are busy at work filling the silos for feeding their dairy cattle during the coming winter. A number of farmers are digging trench silos to care for their surplus corn.

Corn-Fed Hogs

THOUGH the mid-west has one of its best corn crops in history and North Carolina will have a short crop due to dry weather, the man who has a supply of home-grown corn to feed to his hogs may expect the animals to pay him market price for the grain.

"There is grave doubt that hogs can pay the price of corn when it is purchased," says W. W. Shay, swine extension specialist at State College. "The price of corn will be the corn belt price, plus freight and the profits of handling the grain."

Mr. Shay finds that pork held in storage as of September first, is three per cent less than one year ago on the same date. It is 14 per cent less than the average for September first during the past five years, and holdings of pork were 11 per cent less on September first than they were one month earlier or August 1.

At the same time, stocker and feeder shipments were 41 per cent less in July of this year than a year ago and for the average of five years past.

For those who plan to feed hogs, Mr. Shay suggests that barley be planted this fall and ground for the hogs early next spring gets low. Barley is about as valuable as corn for hog feed.

Next season may be favorable to corn production and the man with his usual number of brood sows will reap the benefits, he says.

H. L. Davis of Thomasville, Route 1, has just completed the first trench silo for Davidson county.
