PLANS VITAL TO T. V. A. WORK

Proper Planning Necessary Preliminary To Valley Development

The necessity of proper planning as a preliminary to achieving the full objectives of the Tennessee river basin development is comprehensively set forth in the following statement by Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the board of directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority charged with that program:

"The amount of careful work that must go into the planning of a project like that at Cove Creek is only vaguely sensed by the public.

The Cove Creek Dam, now planned as one of the dams of the country, would have been the highest dam in the world twenty years ago.

"One of the best designed dams in America is the great Boulder Canon Dam on the Colorado river. The public will never realize the painstaking work expended on that design.

"This is just one of the many problems that had to be solved. The same staff of engineers that planned the Boulder Canon Dam is now at work on the plans for the Cove Creek Dam.

"Approximately 60 students will be given self-help positions on the campus. In this group will be both young men and young women. Among the types of work that will be done are: grading papers for instructors, acting as assistants to instructors, waiting on tables in dining room, washing dishes, working on the college farm, caring for grounds, acting as library assistants, and doing several other types of work.

College Accepts Farm Crops for Tuition

College Accepts Farm Crops for Tuition

The purpose of the Tennessee Valley Authority is to help in the general all-around, permanent development of this region. Aside from planning and building public works, it hopes to encourage the development of small industries in the small towns in the hill region.

Estimate Timber Stands Before Selling Trees

Selling timber stands by guess at a small price, Gracher says, has been disastrous to many a landowner in North Carolina.

"I know of one farmer in Caswell county who sold $10,000 worth of timber for $1,500 and another man in Randolph county who sold $2,000 worth for $2,000," says R. W. Gracher, extension forester at State College.

"These two cases may appear to be exaggerated but they are true. Even worse cases have been reported. The trouble is that these men did not know the true stand of timber on their woodlands and sold by guess."

Mr. Gracher has been trying to offset such losses to the farmers by holding a number of timber estimating demonstrations in various parts of the state. Such meetings were recently held in Vance, Yadkin and Wilkes counties. Here the men attending the meetings were given log rules and asked to measure trees and to figure the stand of timber on a given area.

There are several of these log rules but the two principal ones used in North Carolina are the Doyle and Scribner. Sometimes the use of these rules will not give accurate results but it is better than guess work.

Owners of timber land can avoid heavy losses in selling their standing trees if they will use the "tree scale" stick, measuring the diameters and heights of trees of suitable size and then reading the volume of the trees in board feet of lumber. The sticks are simple to understand and are sold in sets.

Those who are doubtful about the amount of timber in a given area and are not able to measure it, should consult with their county farm agent before selling the timber by guess, he says.
