BOTANISTS VISIT HIGHLANDS

T. H. Everett, Edward G. Alexander and Stanley L. Pearson, of the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York City, who are on a collecting expedition in the southeastern states, spent several days at Highlands last week. They were joined by Prof. T. G. Harbison, who is familiar with this region, and succeeded in obtaining many specimens not already represented in their collection. They found Horse Cove one of the most interesting and unique spots in our southern mountains. Other localities in this vicinity can be duplicated elsewhere, they said, but Horse Cove is unique. It is one of Prof. Harbison's favorite haunts, and he has conducted many botanists to this interesting spot.

Mr. Alexander is chief horticulturist of the New York Botanical Garden, and Mr. Everett is assistant curator to Dr. J. K. Small and has written parts for Small's "New Flora" which is nearly off the press. Mr. Pearson is a student at the garden. These young men were delighted with this region, were very enthusiastic about Highlands, and sorry that their schedule would not permit a longer stay. They expect to visit Chapel Hill this fall, when Prof. Harbison returns to the university.
