A total of 2,668 men and women have registered with the Macon county office since the opening date. On December 1, 1934, the active file carried 652 persons, with 16 of these being women and 50 veterans. A 90-day renewal period is set on all applications in the Macon office. Those persons who wish to keep their application cards in the active file, to be considered for work, every 90 days must come into the office, call the office by telephone, or write asking that their card be renewed.

The Macon County Reemployment office is now located in the Macon Theatre building on the second floor. The office was moved to this location three months ago from the Odd Fellows Hall. Office hours are from 8:30 a. m. to 5:00 p. m. on all week days except Saturday, and on all Saturdays the office is closed at 1 p. m. To be of service day or night, the office telephone number is 41, and the manager's home telephone number is 1803.

The Macon office has a registration at the present time carrying men and women skilled in many of the leading trades. The county, having always been rural and non-industrial, has had plenty of skilled labor available. The men of Macon county for many years have found most of their employment outside the county. On many of the best construction jobs scattered well over the United States, such as dams, roads, and general construction during the boom days, were found Macon county men holding down some of the best and highest paid jobs. Many of these men are now available for work, having been forced back to the farm during the depression.

Pennsylvania's "Mysterious Strangers"

WASHINGTON . . . A couple of "mysterious strangers" showed up around here this week. They were joyful Democrats from Pennsylvania. On the left, U. S. Senator-elect, Joseph F. Guffey and on the right, Governor-elect George H. Earle. Mr. Guffey is the first Democratic Senator from Pennsylvania since 1875 and Mr. Earle the first Democratic Governor for that commonwealth since 1890.

The United States Employment Service was created by an act of Congress on June 6, 1933. The set-up began to function in some sections by July 1, 1933. At the time of the setup 23 states were maintaining 192 offices in 120 cities. By January 1, 1934, there were 3,270 offices in operation throughout the entire United States. After the work of the CWA in the spring of 1934 the offices of the service were cut to 648 district offices. At this time there were 181 state offices being operated in industrial sections. The Macon county office is a branch office of district 78, with headquarters at Bryson City.

Since the Service began functioning, until June 30, 1934, a total of 12,634,974 men and women have registered for work. During this time 6,951,523 men and women have been hired and put to work. A record shows that 98.5 per cent of all applicants referred by the National Reemployment Service were hired as being competent for the work referred to.

Under the able leadership of Capus M. Waynick, newspaperman of High Point, the North Carolina Employment Service has been in the front ranks serving employers and employees alike. At one time there was an office in most of the 100 counties of the State. Today there are approximately 50 offices in North Carolina, with about half of these being branch offices.

A month ago Major A. L. Fletcher, of Raleigh, state commissioner of labor, took over the state director's position after the resignation of Mr. Waynick.

"Mother, may I go out to swim?"
"Yes, my dearest daughter; but hang some clothes upon your limbs, or else stay under water."
