Records Will Help Growers Qualify for Soil Payments

Farmers participating in the new farm program need to keep records of the soil-conserving crops they grow and the soil-building practices they carry out.

The records will be a means of proving they are entitled to soil-building payments, said Dean I. O. Schaub, director of the State College extension service.

He pointed out that it is particularly important that farmers keep records showing the acreage of green manure crops grown and the date they are turned under.

They should also keep receipts showing purchases of ground limestone or superphosphate applied to the soil as a soil-building practice.

As a further means of proof, the dean suggested that farmers notify their local committeemen, or their county agent's office, whenever they carry out soil-building practices.

The notification does not have to be in writing, he continued. The important thing is to inform the committeemen.

Then in checking up on a grower's compliance, the committeemen will take note of the practices carried out and give the farmer credit for them.

Before a producer can qualify for the payments, the dean emphasized, he will be required to submit proof of the soil-building practices he has followed.

This is why it is important to keep records, and notify the committeemen of all such practices observed in connection with the new program.
