Irrigation

Is Profitable in Raising Truck for Market

(From the Progressive Farmer)

Home-grown vegetables are usually scarce on Southern markets in September and October, when the weather is dry and gardens hard to maintain. Consequently the man who is prepared to irrigate his land at this time has little competition in marketing his vegetables.

The farmer should work to get the water onto his land at the least expense. Often a dam can be constructed across a small stream and the water led over the field by gravity. Rows should be laid off with about one inch fall to each 50 feet, so water will flow very slowly.

A more expensive outfit involves pumping the water through overhead pipes and having it sprayed over the land like falling rain. This system can be used on somewhat rougher land.

In recent years irrigation by having the water filter through cotton hose has been rather widely used. Porous cotton hose about three inches in diameter is attached to a water pipe and stretched down the row. The water leaks all along the hose and the water soaks into the soil as fast as it comes out.

Crops that usually make best returns from irrigation are tomatoes, lettuce, celery, cucumbers, carrots, cabbage, turnips, snapbeans, etc. The grower will of course select his crops according to his market demands.

—H. P. Stuckey, Director,
Georgia Experiment Station.

200 Attend Annual Higdon Family Reunion

It was the family's 40th meeting, which is held annually in memory of the late Major W. H. Higdon, who came to Macon county 120 years ago from South Mountains, Burke county, at the age of 12 years, and settled at Higdonville. He was the father of T. B. Higdon, of Higdonville, the only survivor of 10 children.

Among the visitors were the Rev. Joseph A. Bryson and son, Dan, of Columbia, Mo., William Bryson, of Rome, Ga., and T. B. Higdon, Jr., of Atlanta, Ga.

Good Old Days

"To what do you attribute your remarkable health?"

"Well," replied the very old gentleman. "I reckon I got a good start on most people by bein' born before germs was discovered, thereby havin' less to worry about."

Max—Did you ever give your wife that little lecture on economy that you spoke about?

Jake—Yes.

Max—Any results?"

Jake—Yes, I had to give up smoking.—B'nai B'rith Magazine.
