Several Changes Expected To Be Made Soon In Cabinet

(Special to The Press-Maconian)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Now that the final election returns are in and it is definitely certain that the Democrats have even a larger majority in both houses of congress than before, Washington is no longer concerning itself with possible opposition to whatever program the president may adopt. Whatever he wants he can get, and until he declares himself, speculation is rather futile as to what the program of the second Roosevelt administration will be.

Washington, as always, is concerned with personalities as much as with issues. One of the most colorful personalities who has been seen on Capitol Hill in the past generation is coming back, to the delight of the newspaper paragraphers and his associates in the senate. He is Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, usually referred to as "Jim Ham."

Mr. Lewis has many claims to distinction. He is, for example, the only man who ever served in the United States congress from two different states. As a young man, with a fiery red beard, he went from his native Virginia to the then pioneer state of Washington in the 1890's, leaped into politics and was twice elected congressman-at-large from that state. He served in the Spanish War, both in Cuba and the Philippines. Then he moved to Chicago, where he combined politics and the practice of law, and by 1912 he had made himself such an important figure in the political affairs of Illinois that he was elected United States senator.

Best and Worst Dressers

For ten years "Jim Ham" was missing from Washington, but in 1930 he was again elected senator from Illinois and this month he was re-elected. Senator Lewis is not only the only owner of a beard in the senate, but is easily the best dressed member of either house of congress.

There is rejoicing in Washington, also, over the return to congress of the only other full set of whiskers, those belonging to Rep. George H. Tinkham of the tenth Massachusetts district. Mr. Tinkham is a picturesque figure, although an entirely different type from Senator Lewis. He pays so little attention to his personal appearance that he is frequently referred to as the worst-dressed man in congress.

Unlike Senator Lewis, who loses no opportunity to impress his personality upon the electorate, Representative Tinkham is reputed to have never made a campaign for election.

A new figure in the next congress whose advent is looked forward to with considerable interest and curiosity is Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Massachusetts. Mr. Lodge has two definite claims to distinction. He is the grandson and namesake of Theodore Roosevelt's closest friend and supporter, who was senator from Massachusetts for 30 years. Also, he defeated

Gov. Curley of Massachusetts in the senatorial election.

Senator Lodge is just barely old enough to be eligible for the senate, in which no one under 30 may sit, by the terms of the constitution. Young Mr. Lodge was 34 in July last. He has the further distinction of being one of the few members of congress whose principal career has been that of a working newspaper man.

Young Lodge started on the Boston Transcript in 1923 and in 1924 joined the staff of the New York Herald Tribune with which he has been connected almost down to the present time.

Cabinet Changes Hinted

Turning from Capitol Hill to the other end of Pennsylvania avenue, where the executive departments of the government center, gossip about personalities focuses largely on possible cabinet changes. It seems to be on the cards that the movement to establish a new cabinet department—that of public welfare, will take form before long.

This new department would be charged with duties which now devolve variously upon the departments of labor, interior, agriculture and treasury. It would take in such activities as those of the children's bureau, the administration of the mother's pensions, and of many of the other phases of the social security act.

The new department may also take over the job of the public health service which is a bureau of the treasury. It would include the bureau of education, which is now in the interior department, and it would probably get the bureaus of the department of agriculture which are concerned with home economics and other phases of rural life not strictly agricultural.

Some Other Guesses

The latest gossip about Donald Richberg is that he is to be appointed either attorney general or a member of the supreme court. Justice Stone's illness is regarded as more serious than public announcements indicate, also a possible vacancy or two on the supreme bench may occur.

The best bet in Washington as to secretary of war is that Gov. Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, past commander of the American Legion, will be the successor of Secretary Woodring.

Some Washington gossips are perfectly certain that Mayor LaGuardia of New York is to be given a cabinet post. There is talk of him as the possible secretary of labor.

The belief also grows here that Secretary Ickes of the interior department will be appointed by the president to the 15-year post of controller general, succeeding John McCarl. There is general agreement that Mr. Ickes would quite as meticulous as was Mr. McCarl in scrutinizing departmental expenditures to see that they keep strictly within the law.

There is every reason to expect that Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, will continue in that post and with greatly increased prestige and power in the administration's high councils.

Cool, Dry Weather Is Best For Hog-Killing

The best time for killing hogs on the farm is a cool, dry afternoon, not the coldest day in mid-winter.

On a bitter cold day the job is too disagreeable and there is danger of the meat freezing on the outside before the animal heat escapes from around the bone.

Ideal butchering weather is in a temperature of 28 to 40 degrees fahrenheit, said R. E. Nance, professor of animal husbandry at State college.

Keep hogs off feed for 24 hours before slaughtering, but give them plenty of fresh water, Nance said. After they have been killed, scald them in water heated to a temperature of 150 degrees.

"If you don't have a thermometer," Nance added, "dip your finger quickly into the water. If it burns badly the first time, it is too hot. If you can dip your finger in and out more than three times in rapid succession, the water is too cold."

After hogs are scalded and scraped, the carcasses should be split down the center of the backbone and the leaf fat loosened from the lower end of the ribs. Hang them in the smoke house to chill over night, but be sure the meat does not freeze.

The next morning, after all animal heat has dissipated, make the various cuts as neat and smooth as possible. Trim each piece closely, as ragged edges and too much fat lower the value of the cured product and also provide a hiding place for meat insects.

Roughage is Cheapest Ration For Dairy Cow

Good roughage has no equal as a dairy feed, said John A. Arey, extension dairy specialist at State college.

Cows can do fairly well on a diet of roughage alone, he added, but when they get no roughage their production falls off heavily and lose weight and vigor.

Roughage tones up the digestive tract, keeps cattle in good health and supplies needed nutrients. Moreover, it is the cheapest ration, reducing feed known.

When good roughage is fed, a cow can eat enough of this feed to obtain more than half the ration needed for their highest milk yield.

A Matter of Weight
