Former Macon Man Seriously Burned

News has come from Pine Bluff, Wyo., that Sheril Brown, 20, grandson of Mrs. Charles A. Lowery of Franklin, nearly lost his life from attempting to rescue a young man from burning.

A fire in a potato cellar entrapped three men, one of whom, Elroy Chavez, 23, did not escape. Young Brown, who had made his escape with the other two men, re-entered the flaming cellar in an unsuccessful attempt to rescue the unfortunate man. He managed to reach the outside again from the blazing inferno, with his clothing enveloping him like a blazing torch. His father, Walter Brown, was badly burned in an attempt to extinguish the flames from his son and the other men who escaped. His life was despaired of for several hours.

The Browns are well known here where Mr. Brown has visited his mother-in-law following the death of his wife, the former Miss Helen Allison, a daughter of Mrs. Lowery. She and his three sisters left here five years ago to make their home with their father in Wyoming.

M'KEE REPLIES TO HIS CRITICS

Road Funds for Jackson Macon And Buncombe Counties Compared

Replying to a speech made by Senator Howell in the state senate February 27, and commenting on figures on highway expenditures in the tenth division E. L. McKee, of Sylva, tenth division highway commissioner, has issued a statement denying that his home county of Jackson has received more than its share of highway funds.

Mr. McKee's statement adds that "the interests of Buncombe have been taken care of directly and indirectly with the utmost fairness and consideration."

Buncombe County
Mr. McKee showed the basis upon which funds were allocated to support his statement, on the basis of needs and the greatest benefit to the division as a whole of federal aid funds. He showed that Jackson was allocated $438,000 of these funds while $1,496,000 went to construct such projects as the Asheville to Parkway highway and other projects, as well as widening and surfacing in many directions out of Asheville.

The section from Cashiers to the South Carolina line constructed with secondary funds and WPA and prison labor, and the shortest route from points in South Carolina and Georgia to the Great Smokies, has been badly needed for 20 years, he explained.

Dillsboro Grade Crossing
"The grade elimination bridge near Dillsboro, on U. S. 19 and 23, was neither suggested nor requested by me. This project was entirely paid for by the government and railway company, with the exception of comparatively small amounts needed for the approaches. The old bridge on No. 23, Asheville to Atlanta route, was condemned by highway engineers. It has since washed out. I had to transfer money from other bridge projects (since also washed out) to construct the present bridge. The location was made by the bridge department and the United States bureau of public roads.

Macon County
"The chairman of the State Highway and Public Works commission requested me to allot the money for the connection between Highlands and the Georgia state line, to carry out an agreement previously made with the Georgia Highway commission. The North Carolina commission built one mile of the 14-mile road from Highlands to Dillard, Ga., to connect our system with this road at the Nantahala Forest boundary. The forest service spent an estimated $200,000. Then the Nantahala forest authorities requested us to complete the surface treatment of the North Carolina section of the road. This we did at a cost of $120,000, all of which was paid for with forestry service funds. This completes a gap of another route from Atlanta to Asheville, with approximately the same distance as U. S. No. 23. On the whole it is a better road as to grades and alignments, allowing greater speed and saving time between Asheville
