Center At Durham To Build Health Of Rejectees

The nation's first resident center for the rehabilitation of reject selectees who have been found to be physically unfit for military duty according to standards of the selective service system was opened in Durham Wednesday by the National Youth Administration. This is one of two centers constructed at cost of $94,000 of which Durham county paid $22,550, and will accommodate 200 men.

The center is one of two in the United States to be devoted to youth rehabilitation from the physical standpoint and is the first to be opened and placed in operation. The second camp is scheduled to open within the next two months at the University of Wisconsin.

The young men will be selected from two special groups, one, young men 21-24 years of age who have been rejected for military service because of physical defects of a remedial nature, while the second group will consist of young men in the 16-24 year age group who are employed by NYA and who have been found to be below the standards of physical fitness for military service. Special emphasis will be given to the nutritional aspects of physical rehabilitation.

Health Program

The type of work to be done at the center is on an experimental basis with a view to spreading the program nationally. Establishment of this project is but one phase of a broad health program being carried out by the NYA in cooperation with public health authorities and local physicians. The NYA health program is providing a medical examination for all young people employed on the out-of-school work program and wherever possible follow-up treatment is arranged through utilization of community facilities.

After being provided work experience and physical training over a period of three to six months, four hundred young men will be sent out to take their places in industry every year.

Cooperating in the project, in addition to the National Youth Administration, are the United States Army, the State Board of Health, the Schools of Medicine of Duke University, the University of North Carolina, and Wake Forest college, and the Rockefeller Foundation.

NEWS and FACTS... of Statewide Interest

THE WORK GOES ON!

North Carolina's brewing industry has just closed its second year of "clean up or close up" activities—a self-imposed task of cooperating with state and local law enforcement officials to see to it that law-violations in retail beer establishments are not hidden behind legal retail licenses.

For us to say merely, that 171 undesirable law-violating outlets have been "closed up" through our cooperation with officials is to tell only part of the story. In many other ways—by friendly criticism, by warning or by recommending refusal of license renewals—our industry has said emphatically that it wants to protect the legitimate dealer from the consequences of the wrongdoings of the comparatively few.

This Committee pledges, as it enters its third activity year, that it will continue its unremitting efforts to help law enforcement officials maintain the general high level of beer retailing.

YOU, the PUBLIC, can also continue your part in this co-operative movement by restricting your patronage to the law-abiding outlets.
