Macon Women Make Record Under Group Of Leaders In Farm And Home Program

By ANNA C. ROWE
District Home Agent

As an example of what members of the North Carolina Federation of Home Demonstration clubs are doing for the war program, Mrs. Florence S. Sherrill, of Franklin, home agent, points to the excellent record of rural women in Macon county in producing and conserving food.

She reports to Ruth Current, in charge of home demonstration work for the State College Extension Service, that following the statewide Food Conservation Workshop at Raleigh in early March, six workshops were held by block leaders for each of the three zones in Franklin. At the request of the Civilian Service Corps Director, Mrs. Gordon Moore, the home agent helped to plan for the canning of both acid and non-acid vegetables, the dehydrating of fruits and vegetables, and the sulphuring of fruits.

So much interest was aroused over dehydrating that the local power company built a dehydrator to be used by the home agent and other leaders in giving dehydrating demonstrations throughout Macon county. Since that time it has been left in communities where groups of families were interested in dehydrating.

Full-size stove driers were also used, but the home makers decided that small half-size driers were more practical.

Cooperation Excellent

All agricultural services in the county cooperated. Sixteen classes in food production, conservation and processing were held in cooperation with the vocational agricultural teacher. These classes were held in communities where there were no home demonstration clubs and included two classes of negro women. A former WPA lunchroom supervisor, a high school home economics instructor, and four home demonstration club women, two of whom were neighborhood leaders, were instructors in the schools.

The suggestion for these conservation classes came as the result of the county-wide workshop and for the first time Macon county was blanketed with food production and conservation demonstrations and information. Miss Ethel Hurst, Mrs. T. J. O'Neil, Mrs. Fred Slagle,

Mrs. Carl Slagle, Miss Amanda Slagle, and Mrs. Robert Parrish were the leaders.

Each instructor was given a list of neighborhood leaders of the communities, whom she visited with a request that the leaders contact all families within the area. The home agent made 14 visits to neighborhood leaders with the instructors, and met with five groups to assist with the organization. She personally gave demonstrations to four classes.

With 16 classes in unorganized communities and 16 home demonstration clubs all functioning, the home agent and the home supervisor of Farm Security devoted their attention to the other communities in the county which had not been reached. Thus, all neighborhoods within the county have been given access to the information developed at the county food conservation workshop.

Neighborhood Leader Study

To check up on this campaign and other work of neighborhood leaders, a study of Macon county farm leadership was made under the supervision of the sociology department of State college.

Under the supervision of the American Red Cross, a course in home nursing was given and 12 rural women from Otto received their certificates in early May. This class was instructed by Mrs. George R. Patillo, R. N. Thirteen other classes were completed in other parts of the county.

"Wartime Family Living", "Wartime Family Clothing", and "Milk For Better Meals" were some of the additional programs which the home demonstration clubs studied this spring and summer. The home demonstration agent has been a very busy person in helping to develop these programs and she made, for example, 56 visits to 41 different homes in May.

The neighborhood leaders have been most active in supporting the work of the 4-H clubs. Membership has shown decided increases in all communities for the young people are anxious to assist in the war program. During the last year Barbara Hurst was named state winner in home accounting, and Betty Jane Waldroop won a trip to the National Club Congress in Chicago.

Enough to Go Around

Now, for the first time in years, both farmers and manufacturers can work for the biggest possible yield without thinking about the market. This year they can sell all they can produce.

As things look now, this condition is due to keep up for some time, but we can't count on its lasting forever. Certainly nobody wants a prosperity built on war! So it's high time that everybody concerned—and that is everybody—gave some thought to keeping things running after the war.

You're busy, we know. So are we. The important thing right now is seeing that there's enough of everything to go around. But we've been devoting a little attention to the problems of the future, too. We feel that the people who have the producing job to do can contribute a lot to the solution of those problems.

And we hope that you, too, busy as you are with growing more food than this country's ever produced, will be turning these problems over in your mind. For if America's farmers and manufacturers, working together, can't find a way to keep the richest country on earth producing enough for everybody, and let the producers make a living in the process—if they can't, why then, who can?
