If you think buying a few small War Bonds' as a "patriotic gesture" and for the benefit of the "front office," only to cash them 60 days afterpurchase, is good business for your country and yourself, you've made a sorry judgment.

Listen to this. Major Lester J. Chase went to the Philippines as an instructor to the Philippine Army. That in itself was a degree of sacrifice in spite of the petty pamphlets put out by the tourist agencies,

He stayed on when the war came, as a swamp and mountain guerilla, living from hour to hour just a jump ahead of the Japs. He subsisted on little food and of poor quality, miles from home and friends.

When the islands were recaptured he came out and was paid $12,020.49 in back pay. He put the whole thing in War Bonds, even to the 49 cents via War Savings Stamps.

Major Chase could have made up for "lost time" with that sort of money. But he elected otherwise. You see, he had seen Jap atrocities. Those of us at home will dig deeper and buy more and bigger War Bonds in the Mighty Seventh War Loan. Set your quota, then make it.

14,000,000 Killed

DRELIMINIARY estimates are that 14,000,000 persons were killed in battle or died from other causes in the great war that has come to an end in Europe. In addition, 5,500,000 persons were permanently incapacitated.

This total does not include civilian casualties, either from direct or indirect war causes. It does not count civilians killed by bombs or the number dead from starvation, malnutrition or war diseases.

In addition to those killed and permanently injured, it is estimated that 30,000,000 men were wounded but returned to duty and that some 10,-000,000 were captured.

The figures given may prove to be too high when final estimates are available, but the total, when known, will indicate that the war in Europe has

We Like It Here

All over Franklin the roosters complaining last week. were Their "cock-a-doodle-doos" were pitched off key and sounded a bit sour. The roosters argued that since the recent town election natural pickings were poorer and unless somebody tosk the trouble to feed them it looked as if they'd starve to death. Comment from a cat was heard, to the effect that she couldn't live in Franklin any longer. A sister kitty asked her why? And she replied: "I can't find anything to eat around any more. The gar-man comes so regularly here bage that he gets my scraps before I can grab them." The sister kitty let out a whole-souled "Meow" and said, "Yes, I think I'll go with you, wherever you may go. I haven't caught a mouse in the last two weeks.

Are they being rationed too? An Irish setter idly wandered to a spot from which he could hear the conversation of the cats. He had lived next door to them for so long that they didn't spit at him any more but accepted his sage wisdom with utmost respect. Said the Setter, "I don't blame you for wanting to leave Franklin. Since this new administration got elected they've got the town so dang-blasted cleaned up I can't find a bone at my own back door Meekly mewing, the biggest cat replied: "Well, I see you're staying on, I reckon we will too, even if they do try to starve us. We don't know exactly why—but we like it here. —J. A. J.
