Urban Children Farther Along Than Rural

Tests given to North Carolina children indicate that urban children as a group are more advanced in subject matter than are rural children, the office of the State Education Commission has reported.

The results of the tests given in the schools in nine counties and seven cities in various sections of North Carolina are incorporated in the report of the commission's committee on the instructional program.

Achievement tests were given in grades four, six, nine, and twelve in certain selected school systems in the state by the committee. Test data indicate that rural white children in all four grades are more advanced in all subjects than are rural Negro children. The greatest variation in average achievement is in the twelfth grade. Urban white children in all four grades are more advanced in all subjects than urban Negro children, and urban children, as a group, achieve at a higher level than rural children.

The importance of supervision for the teaching staff was shown in the results of the achievement tests, according to the report of the committee. It said that in a North Carolina county which has had supervision in the elementary grades for several years, 95 per cent of the children were promoted for the school year 1946-47, while in a neighboring county with no supervision, only 88 per cent of the children were promoted. Not only did total achievement rank higher in the schools with a supervisory program, but the achievement in most individual subjects was also greater.

At the present time supervisory programs in schools for white children are in operation in only 15 of the 100 counties, and in only eight of the 72 cities. Twenty of the 100 counties report supervisors for the Negro schools.
