Highlands' Museum Of Natural History Will Open For Season

The Museum of Natural History will open Saturday, and a summer program of nature study classes for children, Tuesday and Thursday of each week, will begin Tuesday morning, it has been announced.

The museum will be open Tuesday through Saturday of each week, from 10 to 12 a. m., and from 2 to 5 p. m. Sundays the museum, offered as a public service by the Highlands Biological station, will open from 2 to 5 p. m. It will be closed each Monday.

Children's nature classes are to be held at the museum each Tuesday and Thursday beginning at 10 a. m. No charge will be made and children between the ages of six and 14 are invited to take part.

David Arthur Adams, of Charlotte, who recently took over duties as curator at the museum, will conduct the classes. Mr. Adams is a student at North Carolina State college, and in 1947 and 1948 was as-

Will Study Life In Jackson Area To Be Inundated

A coordinated research program, designed to survey the area on the West Fork of the Tuckasee river in Jackson county that will be inundated by the dams now being constructed by the Nantahala Power and Light company, got under way this week. The program is being sponsored by the Highlands Biological station and is financed in part through a donation to the John S. Sewell Fund by Dr. Caryl P. Haskins, of New York City. The area is considered very important to biologists, and an effort is being made to catalogue the important plants and animals before the waters cover the area.

Dr. Lewis Anderson, of Duke University, and Professor Robert K. Godfrey, North Carolina State college, have begun their researches in that area. Dr. Anderson is a specialist in mosses, and Mr. Godfrey in seed plants. They will be joined later in the season by other specialists.

William G. (Bill) Lewis recently completed his course at the Naval Torpedoman's school in Newport, R. I., and spent a 10-day leave with his parents Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Lewis. He is now stationed at Key West, Fla., and is assigned to duty on the H. W. Gilmore.

Legion Resumes Saturday Night Square Dances

The local post of the American Legion this week announced that it will sponsor square dances at the Slagle Memorial building each Saturday evening until further notice.

The dances get under way at 8:30 p. m., and continue until midnight.

The Legion formerly conducted the square dances for several years, but surrendered the privilege to the Rotary club several months ago. The Rotarians discontinued the dances sometime ago.

The dances usually attract many persons from neighboring towns, as well as local persons and tourists.
