MIG 15's (Russian-made jet planes) coming head on and slightly above us. I called them out to my leader and he told me to 'hit the deck full bore'. I saw three flights of four planes, 12 in all, as I split S'ed under them. They were about 400 to 500 feet on my right as I broke. We got down to the ground in nothing flat and I didn't see either my lead man or the MIG's again. Shortly after we got down low, my radio receiver went out and I was really in a mess. My only hope of finding my leader was my radio, so without it I just had to root for myself.

"By now I had used up too much fuel to get home and I decided to try to make it to one of the friendly islands off the west coast. I kept looking behind me for the MIG's but they must not have been following me. I made it to one of the islands and landed on the beach. As I parked the plane, the engine coughed and died—out of gas. I got some gas on the island and took off and returned to Seoul and then on back to my base the next morning. It was quite an experience, believe me. They (the MIG's) shot at my leader but didn't hit him. He made it home O. K. Everybody thought I was a goner, but I was O. K. all the time. That's the way it is when you have the right co-pilot.

"That same morning another one of my classmates got shot up and had to bail out over the water. He never came up after he hit the water. He was Harry Rushing, from Montgomery. Tom Casserly belled his plane in on a sand bar and tried to help pull out, but couldn't find him.

"Tuesday we had another boy shot down and captured. He was in my squadron.

"The Reds are really getting tough now!"

Officials Of 6 Counties Study Physical Education Teaching Done In Schools

No. 7

Two officials from the state department of public instruction met here Monday afternoon with school superintendents, principals, and physical education teachers of six western counties to discuss more effective methods of teaching physical education in elementary schools.

Taylor Dotson and Miss Helen Stewart, physical education advisors with the state department of public instruction, introduced to those attending "Physical Education for Elementary and Secondary Schools", a new publication recently published by the state, and discussed ways to plan more effective programs of instruction in the lower schools.

Represented at the session, held at East Franklin school, were Macon, Jackson, Swain, Cherokee, Clay, and Graham counties.

According to Macon School Supt. Holland McSwain, Mr. Dotson and Miss Stewart plan to return here in the fall for several days to assist in strengthening the physical education programs in Macon's elementary schools.

ings. He said it was his personal opinion that the citizens should work next year for proper property valuation, thus keeping the tax rate low as an inducement to small industry.

The county school superintendent declared that it is important "to get a yes or no" on obtaining funds for more school buses, since orders must be placed with the state by April 10.

In a brief talk, Mr. Sorrells deemed the Negro school "a must" for this coming school year. He suggested that a tax increase of 10 cents would be reasonable, and would bring in about $12,000 a year.

Mrs. E. W. Renshaw, vice-president, presided at the meeting in the absence of President Hattie L. Bryant.
