NOTICE OF RESALE
NORTH CAROLINA
MACON COUNTY
Under and by virtue of an order of the Superior Court of Macon County, made in the special proceeding therein pending entitled "J. H. Stockton, Executor of the Estate of Mrs. Laura (W. G.) Wilkie, vs. W. H. Wilkie, et als"; and under and by virtue of an order of resale upon an advance bid made by Carl Morgan, the undersigned Commissioner will on Saturday, the 25th day of February, 1956, at twelve o'clock, noon, at the door of the Courthouse in Franklin, Macon County, North Carolina, offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash upon an

About 7 o'clock, Mrs. Lunsford opened the front door to let some people in.
The little bundle with the striped tail apparently was between the screen and door, for when she opened it, in scooted the animal. And, of all things, it disappeared in the house.
But they knew it was still there. The smell, you know.
A downstairs neighbor, Robin L. West, (and a true neighbor if ever there was one) came up and joined in the hunt.
The smell got worse.
Naturally.
Finally, they located friend skunk hidden behind a chest of drawers in the bedroom.
Mr. Lunsford called the cops.
And Chief C. D. Baird reported for duty (above and beyond).
With his 38, he blasted the visitor to kingdom come.
But not the smell.
"I told them I could kill the skunk, but not the smell," the brave officer reported.
"I woke up the next night and could smell that thing," declared the true (and tried) neighbor, Mr. West.

Later in the week, he again reported to this column from his post behind the bars in the Nantahala Power and Light Company office:
"Ross sent a check for his light bill in here this morning... I could still smell it."
And how are the Lunsfords faring?

Well, to be honest about it, I don't plan to interview them until the wind changes.
I do, however, wish them well.

For all Harley Stewart knows, his pet fox hound is hot on the trail of Reynard the Fox somewhere out in California, or Alabama, or even Florida.
He took the hound recently to the Georgia field trials in Alma.
For two days running, Mr. Stewart's hound held a firm hold on second place.
Then it disappeared, hot on the trail.
The hound hasn't been seen since.
Mr. Stewart says he hunted high and low for him, before getting homesick and heading for Macon County.
"Maybe when he gets as homesick as I did," he decided, "he'll come home too."

A "flatland turrister", Edgar (Red) Gurganus visited in this area last week as president of the N. C. Jaycees.
"Red" said he'd always admired clouds from afar in his native habitat of Williamston, where anything higher than an ant's back is considered a mountain.
But, he had his first time to drive through one as he topped Cowee Mountain on his way in here Friday afternoon.
"Quite an experience," he mus-ed.

Kissing, reports a research chemist, is only an outgrowth of the body's craving for salt.
Here's his theory:
The caveman discovered that salt had a cooling effect during sultry weather; then he found he could get the salt he needed by licking his companion's cheek; soon he discovered the process was a lot more fun if the companion was of the opposite sex; then everybody forgot all about the salt.

Club Makes Plans For Forestry Book
By JANICE THOMPSON
(Club Reporter)

Fred Whitfield, district extension forester, helped members of the Cullasaja Community 4-H Club Cullasaja Community 4-H Club plan its forestry scrapbook at a meeting February 7 at the school.
Sixteen members were present. Sharon White, president, presided.
Last week the club met at the home of Mrs. Vernon Bryson and took lessons in cooking and handicrafts. Pot holders made by the members were sold for the benefit of the club.
A hike is planned in the near future.
The boys are going to make bird houses with 4H emblems on them for each club member.
