PROTECT FAMILY — The State Board of Health offers hints to protect your family against poisoning.

Lock up all dangerous substances.

Be sure all poisons are clearly marked this can be done by sealing with adhesive tape or using a special marker.

When you throw away drugs or hazardous materials, be sure the contents cannot be reached by children or pets. Warn small children not to eat or drink drugs, chemicals, plants, or berries they find without your permission. Insist on this.

Use cleaning fluids with adequate ventilation only, and avoid breathing vapors.

Protect your skin and eyes when using insect poisons, weed killers, solvents, and cleaning agents. Be sure to wash thoroughly after use of such things, and promptly remove contaminated clothing.

Do not allow food or food utensils to become contaminated when using insect sprays, aerosol mists, rat poisons, weed killers, or cleaning agents.

Before measuring liquid medicine always shake the bottle thoroughly.

Safeguard tablets which are candied, flavored, or colored, since children eat them like candy.

Weed out the left-overs regularly from your medicine chest — especially any prescription drug that your physician ordered for a particular illness.

Use a prescription drug only for the patient for whom the physician ordered it.

State College Answers
Timely Farm Questions

Q. How can I cut my dairy feed costs and still keep my cows producing well?

A. Cut dairy feed costs by using less protein when lush grazing is available. A good grain mixture containing 10 to 12 per cent protein is ample when cows are on lush, rapidly-growing pasture. A simple mixture of 600 pounds of oats and 400 pounds of corn plus steamed bonemeal and salt fed according to production will be very satisfactory until pastures start to dry up.

Q. Does it pay to mow apple orchards early?

A. Yes, early and continuous mowing has several advantages. Mowing will reduce the amount of water and plant nutrients taken from the soil. In addition it speeds up the rate of decay which in return steps up the return of plant nutrients to the soil. It also reduces the shelter for mice.

Q. What are the requirements of a good corn seedbed?

A. The seedbed should be free of clods, compact underneath, and loose on top.

Suggests Advance
Meal Planning

Are you the type of person who waits until you open the refrigerator door before deciding what to have for a meal? Haste makes waste in meal planning just as it does anything else.

Miss Nita Orr, extension frozen foods specialist at N. C. State College, advises advanced meal preparation. She says it will pay off as much as advanced sales planning and preparation does for the business man.

The business man gets his returns in money and in smooth business operation. Yours may cost you money, but your pay-off will be in convenience and in smooth household operation.

Miss Orr says, "When you look ahead, cook ahead, and freeze ahead, you are doing advanced meal planning and preparation."

If managed properly, the use of frozen foods becomes a way of life and just not another way to keep food from one growing season to another. Miss Orr adds: You need to be willing to change your thinking and accept some new ideas to live the frozen foods way.

It is best to plan the family food supply for a year and freeze foods that freeze well. Plan the use of the food and keep it moving. For example, even though frozen strawberries may be good to eat after two years' storage, it is good zero space management to eat them within a year.

Miss Orr suggests making a plan for your family's food supply for a year. Keep an inventory of food which you put in your freezer and in the locker at the plant. This may be a simple list with the name of the food and the number of packages.

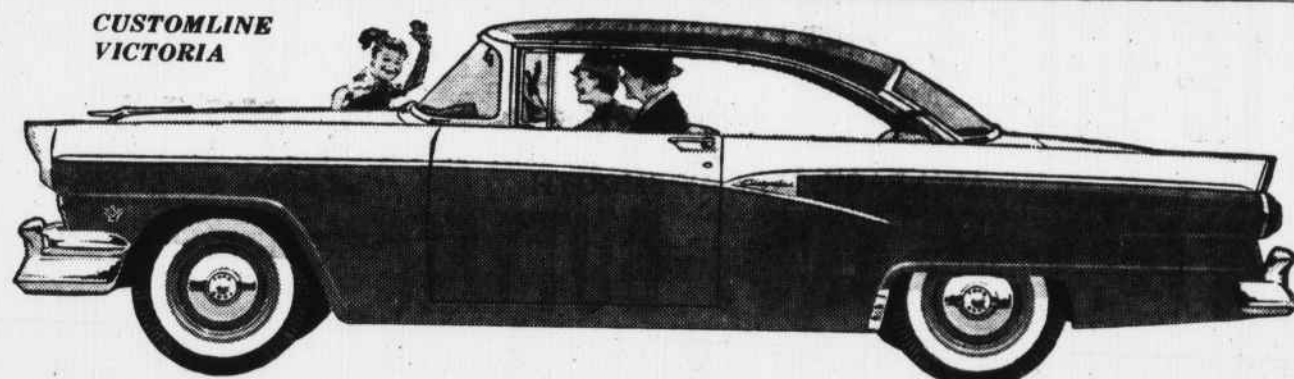

Check off the food as it is used. This will avoid "lost" packages than turn up after longer storage than you intended.
