MIXED PICKLES

1 quart small cucumbers
1 pint pickling onions
1 pint small carrots
1 pod hot red pepper
2 sweet red peppers
1 pint 1/2" pieces of celery
4 tablespoons mustard seed
2 tablespoons celery seed
1 1/2 cups sugar
5 cups vinegar
1 pint cauliflower
spices if desired.

Soak cucumbers and onions separately — 24 hours in brine made by dissolving one cup salt in one gallon cold water. Rinse and drain. Scrape carrots and chop peppers. Combine all ingredients and simmer until tender. Pack in hot Ball jars and seal at once.

Swafford's Sayin's

You may have the mistaken idea that your 'ole country groceryman has an easy time. Maybe you think that he just sits around and waits for an occasional customer to drop in. Well, just come in some morning, say 6:30, and stay with me until 7:00 p. m. or later, and then say — "Well I think you would say — "Go home, Paul, and don't do a thing or go anywhere — just eat your supper and go to bed and rest for you have done enough for one day."

I close the store every Thursday p. m. — Well — just to rest and get a little outside recreation. I mean that I plan that that way, but you know how it is — There is always something happens to hinder. A few days ago I put my rod and reel in the car — had everything I needed (except some red worms) to take off and go fishing, when I closed at noon. Just as soon as I could eat my lunch and put on some older clothes I told Elizabeth (my wife) that I had better scatter some barnyard fertilizer that was piled up behind the barn — Knew it wouldn't take long — and also knew that there is where plenty of redworms live. I hustled me an old tin can and with my pitchfork began digging worms and occasionally throwing a forkful of manure over the ground. I soon had plenty of big redworms — Everything was going my way — I could just feel those big fish — jumping at the end of my line — when all of a sudden — I heard Elizabeth say, (right behind me) "Don't you guess we had better work some in the garden when you get thru' there?" Before I could think of an excuse — she was on her way — carrying a hoe. Dazed I stood there a few minutes and (you guessed it) regretfully took my toe and turned that precious tin can over — stood there and watched the last one of those worms go home. — I couldn't go fishing. There was work to do. Speakin' of work — I gotta get busy. Here comes a truck load of stuff I'll have to put somewhere.

P. S. — I just thought of one to tell you — but you'll have to wait 'till next week.
