Poultry And Tobacco

January Marked By Special Farm Planning Meetings

By T. H. FAGG
(County Agent)

Agriculturally, January in Macon County was marked by two special planning sessions between farmers and personnel of the extension service.

One dealt with poultry and the other with tobacco.

On Jan. 10, an excellent poultry planning meeting was held. People participating in the meeting were poultry specialists from N. C. State College, local extension workers, and some 50 poultry producers in the county. It was brought out in the meeting that as of Jan. 1, 1957, there were 150,000 hatching egg birds in Macon County, approximately 30,000 broilers, and practically no commercial egg flocks. This gives a gross income in the hatching egg industry alone of nearly one and a quarter million dollars yearly.

Plan Highlights

Some highlights in the poultry plan for the county in 1957 are major emphasis on hatching egg industry, with a proposed increase in number of birds by 20,000 to up gross income by approximately $130,000; working with and trying to secure markets for farmers interested in commercial egg production; and giving all assistance possible to farmers in broiler production.

It was recommended that poultrymen raise their replacements from baby chicks, or at least secure their pullets from farmers who grow them out in the country. Use of pole-type construction in housing (lumber from farm where possible) to cut costs was recommended. Cool conditions in the house to increase production and hatchability also was included.

On Jan. 18 a tobacco planning meeting was held with 45 Macon County tobacco producers, specialists from Raleigh, and local county agent's staff participating.

As an introduction to the meeting, it was pointed out that in 1955 there were 217 tobacco allotments in the county with a total acreage of 62.18 acres. Only 177 of these allotments were planted, amounting to 50.9 acres. The total production in Macon County in 1955 was 84,437 pounds, or 1,657 pounds per acre, which averaged 55 cents per pound for a gross of $46,440, or $910 per acre. This yield is approximately five hundred pounds under the state average. It was further pointed out that in 1956 there were 215 allotments in Macon County. Only 158 of these allotments were planted. This amounted to an acreage of 46.88 acres. Forty-four farmers put their allotments in the soil bank, this acreage amounting to 17.82 acres, for which they received $4,784.99. Thirteen farmers did not plant acreage or put it in the Soil Bank. Figures on total yields, gross income, etc., are not yet available for 1956, but indications are that it will average sixty cents or better per pound.

A plan to assist tobacco farmers with increasing their income during 1957 has been drawn. The plans centers on increased production and improvement in quality and good management.
