The Franklin Press

The Highlands Maconian

nd class mail privileges authorized at Franklin, N. C. Puolished every Thursday by The Franklin Press

Telephone 24

Established in 1886 as The Franklin Press

Member: N. C. Press Association, National Editorial Association, Carolinas Press Photographers Association. Charter member, National Conference of Weekly Newspaper Editors.

BOB S SLOAN		Pu	blisher and	Advertising Manager
				Editor
				News Editor
MRS. ROBERT BRY	SON			Office Manager
MRS. BOB SLOAN	1 - 1			. Society Editor
CARL P CABE	e 4 *			Operator-Machinist
PRANK A STARRET	TTE			Compositor
G. E. CRAWFORD				Stereotyper
DAVID H SUTTON				Commercial Printer

THURSDAY, SEPT. 4, 1958

... But Nobody Does

Community planning is a little like the weather, In the case of the planning, everybody says, "sure, we ought to plan"-but nobody does.

We probably won't till one of two things happens-till either we become convinced it will pay off in dollars and cents or till conditions force us to, at terrific cost because it wasn't done sooner.

Since becoming convinced it would pay off in dollars and cents would save the useless expenditure of a lot of dollars and cents that delay would necessitate, we present, at the bottom of this page, some rather strong evidence that planning, now, is just plain good business.

"A motorist is not a shopper until he becomes a pedestrian", says a study of the Town of Mooresville, quoted by Popular Government. And because it waited too long to do it, the town of Albemarle "has been forced to spend sizable sums of money in recent years to widen some of the uptown streets", and will be forced to spend other sizable sums later, points out that town's Stanly News and Press.

Except for minor details, you could write "Frank lin" instead of "Mooresville" into the first piece, and "Franklin" instead of "Albemarle" into the second, and find what is said fits us snugly.

Today, lack of planning is costing uptown merchants in Franklin thousands of dollars; because "a motorist is not a shopper until he becomes a pedestrian"-and the parking situation sometimes, makes it almost impossible to become a pedestrian.

And with the town growing, and traffic growing even faster, it's obvious the time is coming when we'll be forced to broaden the ox-cart width streets of Franklin. When is the best time to start? Well, the more buildings there are, the more it would cost to push 'em back out of the way of a widened street. It would cost two or three times as much now as it would have five or ten years ago; it probably would cost six or seven times as much five or ten years from now as it would today.

While something could be done now about the narrow residential streets, it would be virtually a financial impossibility to widen an uptown street overnight. The only practical way is to set a building line, and require that new buildings be set back of that line; thus, after a while, most of the buildings would be back far enough to permit street widening. But the longer that is put off, the more it will cost-and the longer it will take to get those buildings back.

And of course street widening is only one phase of the many-sided need for planning. At the moment, for example, parking space is the crying

Has Franklin good enough business leadership to start doing something about what someday it will be forced to do, and to start now, when it will cost

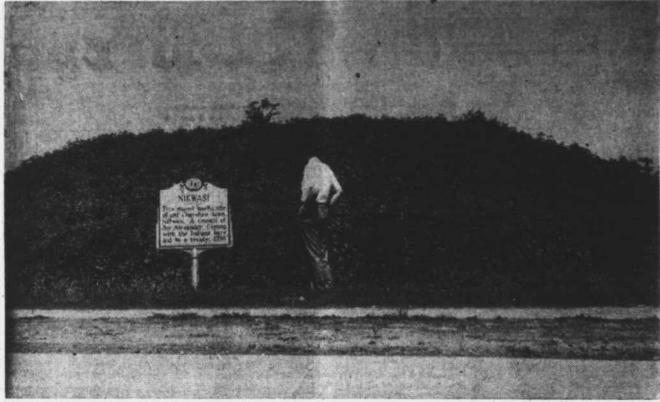

Toward Better Teaching

It is a truism that the education provided by a school is only as good as the teaching in the school.

It is good news, therefore, that this year Macon County school people will make a conscious, concerted effort to improve the quality of the instruction in this county's schools. And Supt. H. Bueck, at the teachers' meeting on the eve of the opening of schools, wisely came up with specific, definite suggestions on how it can be done.

He proposed in-service training. That is, the teachers will carry on an organized campaign for professional improvement. They will exchange experiences and ideas, and share discoveries of better ways to do certain things. In that way, they will learn from each other-the way most of us acquire whatever knowledge we have.

Out of this development of better techniques of teaching will surely come more professional pride;

Franklin's Indian Mound, said to be the largest one an opportunity to North Carolina, offers combine an interesting phenomenon of the past with present-day beauty. Various ways of making the mound, which stands near the site of the ancient Cherokee village of Nikwaski, an attraction to visitors have been suggested One plan, to which the topography lends itself, is a water-filled "moat" around the mound, planted with water lilies; a rustic bridge across from highway to mound; and flowers, and possibly a small museum, on the mound itself.

and out of that undoubtedly will come better attitudes. That is at the heart of the problem, because, as Mr. Bueck suggested: What counts is 'not the degrees we hold, but our attitude toward the work we do".

Bouquet

Many of us criticize the Post Office Department. Sometimes the criticism isn't justified, but often it is. For there has been a growing tendency in Wash ington to give not the most service possible, but the least. Post office employes and carriers, over the nation, for example, have been forbidden to continue performing certain little services they had become accustomed to perform, just as a matter of accommodation.

As so often happens, though, all the regulations fail to eliminate the kindly, human element, especially at the local level.

A case in point is the air mail envelopes at the Franklin post office. Air mail postage went up August 1 from 6 to 7 cents, and the local office hasn't received the new 7-cent envelopes. So the folks in the local post office have affixed extra 1cent stamps to the old envelopes. They easily might have required every customer to buy and affix the extra stamps-but they didn't.

There's still a lot of thoughtful tresy in the world-even in the Post Office Department.

So Monday was Labor Day? Heck! what day

A one-way street, with a downhill grade, is an invitation to speeding. That's just what is offered on the eastern section of Palmer Street. And so they're driving faster and faster along Palmer. But if there's ever a police officer on that street checking speeds, it's when we aren't around.

New Psychiatric Technique

(Frederick, Colo., Farmer & Miner)

The best way to forget all your troubles is to wear a pair of

Too Good For Too Much

(Campbellsville, Ky., News)

Under the present day economic system, too many people's credit is too good for too much.

... And Waynesville And Franklin

J. A. Gray, Sr., publisher of The Sylva Herald, and president of the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce, is spear-heading a program for dedicating the new highway from Balsam to Sylva. The date and final plans are dependent upon completion of the bridge across Scott's Creek, the railroad and Dark Ridge Road.

Gray, an avid enthesiast of the road, timed himself from the city limits of Sylva to the first traffic light at Allens Creek road-15 minutes-and not once over 55 miles an hour.

This is going to make Waynesville and Sylva closer neigh-

Language Training

(Suffolk County, N. Y., News)

Most U. S. public schools fall down badly when it comes to teaching foreign languages. The situation is often compared with that in European schools, which as a rule provide early and prolonged training in languages other than the native

The obvious retort generally is not long in coming: Europeans have much greater need of other languages, because various countries and language groups are close together. This retort makes sense. Europeans have had to be multilingual to get along and do business with one another.

The thing that lessens the good sense of the retort is our old friend global shrinkage. Flight makes Europeans—and Africans and Asians, for that matter—our neighbors. When today's kindergarteners take their places in the adult world trips abroad may be as commonplace as trips to a neighboring state

All this serves as background for a U.S. Office of Education report which notes that not even 15 per cent of our high school students are enrolled in modern language courses. The study began as a survey of language teaching in the nation's high schools, but the experts wound up recommending that language instruction should begin in the grade schools and go on for at least four years.

Marion B. Folsom, then secretary of health, education and welfare, said when the study began that the United States is "the most backward nation in the world in the vital field of language competence." We need not develop any inferiority complex about this; we have not had the compelling historical reasons for language training that Europe has had. But the shrinking world makes it clearly time, now, for U. S. schools to begin catching up in this vital field.

REVITALIZING A TOWN

'A MOTORIST IS NOT A SHOPPER UNTIL HE BECOMES A PEDESTRIAN'

improvement of Mooresville's cen- superblock tral business district, which has been labeled the "Mooresville ice vehicles be directed into off-Plan," is aimed to fill only part ties. of the total need-but a vital part -that of building convenience and attractiveness into a revitalthe proposal was set forth in town board of commissioners.

"How can convenience be improved? By improving accessibility. A motorist is not a shopper hibited to all except emergency until he becomes a pedestrian. vehicles. For the convenience of quate off-street parking in the business district.

become a shopper. How can this be done? Sheltered, tree-fronts in their construction or lined pedestrian ways, readily ac-remodeling. cessible to parking areas, separated from vehicular traffic; and attractive stores and display areas. Make those changes which will the old Business District the characteristics of a new mod-large block.

3. That shoppers' cars and serv- present situation,

4. That a central mall eventually replace a portion of Main Street, uniting the new superblock, and providing for safe, attractive and efficient pedestrian circulation. The mall will be parkconsultants' report to the like, with planted islands of trees and flowering shrubs. It will be reserved for pedestrians and pro-hibited to all except emergency Make it easy for the motorist to shoppers, pedestrian walks will become a pedestrian. Provide ade- connect parking areas with the mall and other store frontages. It is anticipated that new stores, "After the motorist becomes a and perhaps some of the old pedestrian, make it easy, enjoy- stores, facing a street or the mall an average city, as past planning of the time we plan for five or able, attractive, and safe for him on one side and a parking area in the rear, will utilize double

Planned Towns Don't Just Happen

STANLEY NEWS AND PRESS

uals and groups.

district be redesigned as a single quate planning in the years gone wisest possible manner.

best possible plans available for large block.

by. Most of them, however, are Some of the things which the growth and development of 2. That through traffic event-well enough planned that they should come in for consideration our city.

growth and expansion from their or any other city are:

poorly planned. Fifty years ago utilized to its best advantage. nobody was able to foresee the tremendous growth of cities, the advent of the motor car and the truck as the almost universal means of transportation, and the need for parking space which these entail.

As a result, some streets are far too narrow for the traffic to the most people. they are called upon to carry today. Others are crooked and poorly graded. Some cities and towns space in each area of the city. jumbled up, with no defined business industrial or goes. The city has been forced 10 years. We should seek to proto spend sizable sums of money ject our plans into the future in recent years to widen some of and judge them on the basis of the uptown streets. Others must what we believe will be the sitube widened in the years to come. ation 25, or even 50, years hence. It does have rather well defined In the light of past experience dential sections, and has a great what. deal of natural beauty.

we hope that it continues to grow. guidance for its expansion. Ten don't just happen. They are the to just make "happen-so" growth. For the planning to be effective.

To accomplish this proposal, the following specific program was planning by far-sighted individ- Commission whose responsibility study made by experts in the it is to try to direct the growth planning field, with local inter-

Popular Government

Subdivisions should be laid out carefully, with special attention to making streets sufficiently wide and tying them in with existing street patterns. Plans included for neighbor hood shopping centers in appropriate locations to be convenient Adequate playground and park

Ample parking area in all business areas. Planners should think in terms Albemarle is considered about of long range development. Most shopping, industrial, and resi- we will even then fall short some-

Albemarle is now at a point The city is still growing, and in its development when it needs we hope that it continues to grow. guidance for its expansion. Ten

1. That the four block central Relatively rew cities and towns of the city and the development ested citizens making up a comportion of the present business today reveal anything like ade- of its perimeter areas in the mission to put into execution the routine affair.

STRICTLY

PERSONAL

By WEIMAR JONES

The other night, I had oc was. She laughed good-naturedly in and commented, "you learn son Now telephoning, long distance. Then she suggested maybe John has ceased to be unusual. So Smith's number had been chang this time I gave it no special con- ed; so she got Birmingham Infor

Well, I was wrong! For what answered; it was the wrong John happened was extraordinary in-Smith! So I gave the local operator the street address of my John I called the long distance op-erator and gave her the usual Smith, and asked that she request Birmingham Information to give information, my name and numher the correct number of the ber and the name of the person I wanted in Birmingham. (For John Smith at that address. She convenience, we'll call him John suggested maybe I'd like to talk number. For the time has long passed when you could tell "Cen-"If you'll have your operator tral" you wanted John Smith in ring back on the number you Birmingham; "I think he lives gave in the first place, and if about a mile out from town, and you'll listen to the recording twice. he may not have a telephone, it to the operator to find him for trated, twice, by that already you. No! nowadays you must have memorized recording. I listened the other fellow's number, and And then, sure enough, a special time it sounded like a recording. I heard the local operator place And here's what I was told:

ingham number being rung.

"This is a recorded announce-telephone numbers.)

ment. The number you are calling is not a working number . . ." And that voice went on and on, a voice incredibly smooth, and incredibly devoid of any note of human understanding. On and on it went, telling me what I had done and had not all ready to spring on me for that done and what I should do and should not do; never hesitating, never pausing for a comment from me. No! that recorded announcement had the floor. And as I listened, I felt myself increasingly trapped. I couldn't talk back, I couldn't ask for a repetition of something I hadn't caught, I couldn't even inquire what kind of a number a "not a working number" was. I could only listen. . . and feel more and more helpless in the face of that uninterruptable, inhuman voice, 'way down in Alabama.

Just as I was ready to explode. the local operator asked me to give her the Birmingham number again. I gave it. She had Ashe. distance a working number . . ." and on her for her efforts. and on and on.

what a "not a working number" tried!

thing new every day, don't you?' sideration; it would be just an mation on the line and was given other long distance call, a purely a different number. I heard it ring, and a wholly strange voi to Birmingham Information, and repeated the request to her. O, yes; and I gave her his Said she:

a special operator will but maybe you can eget him on answer. the phone next door" — and leave So I braced myself to be frus

I had it. (At our house, there's operator did answer Once more I repeated my story phone, literally "papered" with It. too, was so memorized by that the call in Asheville, and a "That t moment later I heard the Birm- continued. "That telephone has been dis

I know I shouldn't have done Then I heard something else, it: I'm sure it was rude. But something brand new. Said a here at last was a voice I could talk back to. And so I shouted

"Well, why in heck wasn't I told that in the first place?

I shouted that, and then I was seized with terror I slammed un the receiver and rushed out of earshot of the phone. For, undoubtedly, they had a recording Automation? It is here! And don't like it worth a darn.

I don't like it because I don't like efficiency for the phone company at the expense of the customer. I don't like it because it destroys human relationships; half the fun of doing things in this world comes from the friendly, joking interchanges between person and person. And I don't like it because I resent being put at the mercy of a "recorded announcement" - being made the slave of a machine.

P.S. I've found the local long operators ville ring it again. And again courteous, obliging and efficient:

I heard that you-can't-answer and besides, I was a little back voice saying again, with never a change in tone, "This is tried to make up for that show a recorded announcement. The of bad manners by calling the number you are calling is not local operator back and thanking

I couldn't have thanked that The local operator came to my darn recording; it wouldn't have escue once more, and I asked listened. And besides, it hadn't

TENTING TONIGHT

Are Americans Becoming Citified?

Are Americans becoming "city- sites.

fied"? Definitely. reports figures on camping out during the summer holiday season just ended; the big rush to sleep under the stars.

No nation of farmers, it comfor primitive outing.

In many cities, continues the Washington newspaper, boys and girls with camping equipment took over railway and bus stations. In New York it is estimated that between 4,000 and 8,000 juvenile campers departed The month of July found about youngsters in regular camps throughout the country while thousands of others were on camping trips with parents

The zeal for camping out has The proposal for the physical ually be routed around the new can develop a workable plan of in any planning program for this dren and adults that makers of tents and sleeping bags have been Careful attention to zoning re- doing a booming business. Some There are many sound reasons quests, so that property values Western states are engaged in street parking and loading facili- why our cities and towns are may be maintained and property programs to promote their camp-

Andre Maurois, a French observer of American life, comment Washington Post. And it cites ing on the appeal of outdoor life here says: "The American has a feeling and a hunger for space. far more than a feeling and a hunger for time." Perhaps it is because of the tensions brought No nation of larmers, it com-ments, would have such a yen for primitive outing.

by slavery to time that the Ameri-can feels so strongly in his leisure moments the appeal of the wide open spaces, which are a reminder of his once primitive exist ence.

UNCLE ALEX'S SAYIN'S

Reason why most of us can't get along with other people is we expect them to be as reason able as we ain't.

These here ball-point pens a heap like children. They don't give no sign they're tired till they're plumb give-out.

DO YOU REMEMBER?

Looking Backward Through the Files of The Press 65 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

St. Agnes' school will open next Monday.

P. Howard, Esq., of Smith's Bridge, was in town Monday. Peaches are more plentiful than they have been for several

Mr. R. L. Porter has sent off his bond as brandy gauger, and will get his commission in a few days,

25 YEARS AGO (1933)

The Franklin branch of the Carolina Provision Company which has headquarters in Cornelia, Ga., has been purchased by M. L. Dowdle, local business man, and the name of the concern changed to the Dowdle Wholesale Company, Inc.

At a meeting of the Board of Commissioners of the Town of Highlands, the tax rate was placed at $3, instead of $2.95 as last year, Miss Hazel V. Penland and Charles C. Sutton were married at the Methodist parsonage on Bonny Crest September 2, the Rev. G. N. Dulin officiating.

10 YEARS AGO

Macon County drys won a better than 10-to-1 victory in Saturday's special election. The vote to outlaw legal sale of beer was just under 10 to 1, while the vote against wine was more than 12 to 1.

A new $411 fire siren of the latest type arrived this week, and installation started yesterday.