J. C. Altruck, of Atlanta, Ga., a summer resident here, died Tuesday night in Birmingham, Ala., while on a business trip. Funeral arrangements are incomplete, but services are planned here. Mr. Altruck had a home on Wayah Road.

Area's E.S.C. Office Seeks To Find Jobs

By Sam Colville
I work for the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina in the Bryson City local office, which serves Macon and Swain Counties. In North Carolina there are 66 full-time offices, located throughout the state, so that each county can be served. The local offices perform a variety of services, but their chief function is to offer assistance to workers seeking employment and to employers seeking workers.

When a person reports to our office seeking work, our trained staff makes every effort to place him on a job that most nearly suits his qualifications and interests. Likewise, when an employer contacts the office for workers, we try to send him an applicant that is best suited to that job. Finding jobs for applicants and finding applicants for jobs is in no means confined to this area. When a worker cannot be found in this area we have what is called a clearance system whereby workers who have applied to offices in other parts of the country may be considered for the job. In the same manner, when there is no job available for the applicant locally, his record may be distributed to other offices which might have a job that would suit his qualifications.

When jobs are scarce, the placement of workers in suitable jobs becomes more difficult.

cult. When suitable jobs are not available the Unemployment Insurance phase of our program is put into operation for the insured worker. Benefits are paid to unemployed persons on a weekly basis until they can find work on their own or be placed by the Employment Service.

control of nematodes, when it is coupled with crop rotation and soil fumigation, it gives the best control known. However, Todd cautions that the stubbles must be completely exposed to the sun and wind, if the practice is to be effective.

Q. How are this fall's prices for feeder calves and yearling steers expected to compare with those of a year ago?

A. The prices are expected to be generally higher. The rise in beef prices experienced last fall and winter has held firm throughout the year and shows no immediate indications of dropping back to previous levels. However, this does not mean that there will not be any profit in feeding cattle this year. Cattle profits depend to a large degree on feed prices. And this year's bumper feed crop is expected to favor the marketing of feed through cattle.

State College Answers Timely Farm Questions

Q. Is there any advantage to plowing up tobacco stubbles as soon as harvest is complete?

A. Yes. F. W. A. Todd, extension plant pathologist at N. C. State College, reports that the nematode population can be reduced as much as 50 to 70 percent by exposing old tobacco roots to the drying effect of the sun and wind. While this reduction is not enough to give practical

OLD AND NEW—At left is an example of the modern corn storage facilities going up on North Carolina farms as farmers realize the increasing importance of keeping their grain at harvest time. The steel bins are weather and rat proof, while the old corn crib at the right serves as an invitation to both weather and rodent damage. Specialists at N. C. State College estimate that a million bushels of new storage facilities have been added to North Carolina farms in recent weeks, as Tar Heel farmers prepare to harvest a near-record 78 million bushels of corn this fall.
