A common occurrence with amateur photographers is the steady parade of bare, toneless skies in outdoor pictures. Without the framing of sky tones to give pictures balance, they have a curiously unfinished look.

Desired tone is easily had in black-and-white shooting through use of green, medium-yellow or red filters. Color shooters can beef up sky tones with a polarizing filter.

If your pictures suffer from washed-out skies, get in the habit of using filters for a simple and effective solution to this problem.

We are happy to announce this week that we have added a new employee to our staff. We hope with this new addition we will be able to give a little better and faster service. Our new employee is Mr. Harold Dowdle, from Springfield, Va.

Get in the habit, too, of dropping in at GENE'S STUDIO & CAMERA HOUSE for your photo needs. We stock everything in the line of film, filters, accessories and supplies, to keep any snapshot in fine shooting fettle. Fibre Bounce Important To Rugs Looks

You probably know that bouncing a rubber ball has something to do with the compression of air inside and its return to normal when the pressure is released. But did you know that this same idea of springiness is a vital quality in your carpet fibers?

This fiber bounciness is important for good looks, longer wearing, and easier cleaning, points out Mrs. Edith McGlamery, home development specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service.

A fiber is springy because the crimp, or waviness, of a fiber causes it to repel another fiber like itself. If you press the fibers together by walking or placing furniture on them, they spring back as close as possible to their original shape when the pressure is taken away. This is called resiliency.

If the fibers haven't a high degree of resiliency, they will crush. Results will be a spotty looking rug because crushed fibers reflect the light differently. Repeated pressure on the little creases in the fibers causes them to break and the rug looks worn. Dirt and fibers are matted together making the rug extremely difficult to clean. A vacuum or steaming process will revive matted fibers.

The more common rug fibers are wool and acrylic. (Acrilan, Dynel, Verel) nylon and super L. rayon, cotton, and acetate.

Considered Contour Strip Cropping?

Fall seeding season is an ideal time for establishing contour strip cropping, according to J. Frank Doggett, soil conservation specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service.

Contour strip cropping is a pattern of farming in alternate contour bands of close growing and till crops, explains Mr. Doggett. In many ways it is the most satisfactory means of erosion control available to farmers. It protects against both water and wind erosion. And it can be used on sandy and shallow stoney soils where terracing is not practical.

It is also used on slopes too steep for terraces and on land to nearly level that terraces are not necessary. It is generally used without terraces, but on extremely erodible soils it may be used with terraces.

Contour strip cropping is simply a good soil conserving rotation established in contour bands rather than fields, declares Mr. Doggett. It has many advantages: Once established, it makes a rotation simple and easy to follow. It cost nothing to establish and provides no obstacles to farm machinery. No more land is required to farm land in a given rotation in strips than in fields. Many farmers will establish
