

BRIEFS

Good morning!

This is our third appearance.

Do your Christmas shopping early.

How about that meat market and drug store?

This Christmas honors will doubtless be divided between the stocking and the bootleg.

Automobiles may never run on onion juice, but many of them seem to run very well on credit.

The wind may be tempered to the shorn lamb, but nothing at all is done for the silk-clad calf.

Mr. Walter B. Graham who spent all of last week in South Carolina on business, has returned.

There is no telling what styles will do, but no doubt these short skirts will kneecap the climax.

You may break, you may shatter the bar if you will, but John Barleycorn will have his still still.

Hair tonic may not raise hair, but prohibition has demonstrated that it will raise what Sherman said war is.

When a man expresses sympathy for old maids he means that he regrets their inability to do as well as his wife did.

Mr. J. B. Stimpson and son, J. F. Stimpson, of Siloam were here this week on business with Mr. Henry A. Matthews.

In the old days he wasn't brought home until morning, and in these bootleg days there is mourning when he is brought home.

The Cabinet slate doesn't interest the average man so much as the slate they are selling this year under the name of coal.

Miss Josie Oldham who spent a few days with her sister, Mrs. J. E. Caviness, returned to her home at White Hill, on Tuesday.

For the class in arithmetic: If you pay $16 a ton for anthracite, slate and slag, at what rate per ton are you buying the coal?
