

JACKSON SPRINGS NEWS

The West End graded school and faculty presented a play, "The Old-Fashioned Mother," at the high school auditorium on Tuesday evening of this week. One-half of the proceeds will go towards the indebtedness of the Presbyterian manse.

A number of community players gave "Always in Trouble," a musical comedy, at the West End graded school auditorium on Tuesday evening of last week.

Rev. R. G. Matheson is slowly improving after a few days illness. Mrs. Matheson is up again, and we hope she will soon be able to be out.

A large crowd attended the community moving picture show, and box supper that followed the show, on Thursday evening at the high school auditorium.

Miss Myrtle Poole has returned from Fayetteville, where she took treatment at the Highsmith Hospital.

The foundation has been laid for Marcus M. E. church, a few miles southwest of here. This community needs a new church, and our village needs M. E. and Baptist churches. There have been several families in the past few years moved into the village, and a large number of them are of these denominations; naturally children coming here to school would rather attend Sunday school and church here than to go to some country church. All denominations are always welcome in the Presbyterian church, but with co-operation of the pastors and congregations better service could be done in the community.

Rull McLeod, the oldest of seven boys of Mr. and Mrs. K. A. McLeod, of Scotch descent, shows promise of an industrious farmer and business man. Last fall he bought early Wakefield cabbage seed and sowed them in an old tobacco bed against his father's counsel, and now, when his father is not strong enough for farm work from an attack of pneumonia, he is kept busy part of his time filling his son's orders for cabbage plants. Young McLeod is a hard worker, but is not wild like some of the old scotch. He has the name of being a good cook, and cooks breakfast for his mother; after school hours you never see him loafing, but you could soon see him at work on the farm. He sets out young fruit trees each year, although he is nearly grown and will soon be leaving home. Young McLeod is among the nineteen seniors in high school and passed off his fall term's work with good grades, but struck a stump after the holidays, for he found two years work confronting him as he stopped school for the farm work last spring before the school closed. He found the work had to be passed off, and to do it he had to take over one subject and stand the examinations on the others. And on all of that, although he runs on the punctuality roll during the fall semester, he had to be out of school during his father's illness and had that work to make up. But the young fellow never got discouraged, and is going at his work with determination to finish with his class. We wish we had more boys of McLeod's calibre.

The Derby Memorial School boys defeated Hoffman in basket ball 19 to 11 on Friday afternoon. Little scored 17 of his team mates' points, yet he had the support of the whole team which held Hoffman to 1 point in the last half.
