Vautrey—Two Reminders of the past.
Four acts. Time to play, about two hours.

Synopsis:

The action begins in Vautreyville, a small Kentucky town. Mr. Vautrey, a very successful breeder of fine racing horses, has accumulated a snug little fortune. The old home-town does not afford ample opportunities for the social ambitions of Mrs. Vau-treay, and she influences her husband to move to New York. They sell their last horse, "Borrowed Money," to Roland Street, a poor neighbor boy who loves Fannie, and for whom she is waiting.

While in New York, Mr. Ramer, a wealthy old bachelor and multimillionaire is introduced to the family, and wishes to marry Fannie. This is scorned by Fannie but Mrs. Vautrey urges it because of Mr. Ramer's great wealth. Mr. Ramer tries to manipulate Mr. Vautrey's investments so as to bankrupt him in order to force him to approve the marriage. In the meantime Roland and his horse have become famous, and Roland sells the horse for $50,000 and goes to Mrs.

Vautrey to ask for Fannie's hand.
He learns of Mr. Vautrey's financial troubles and through the direction of a mutual friend he applies his mney in Mr. Vautrey's favor in time to save him from bankruptcy. He then marries Fannie, and they all go back to the "Old Kentucky Home."

After a while every little boy will learn that it is wrong to tell a lie unless you are a parent talking to a boy.
