GUNTER'S STORE

VASS, NORTH CAROLINA

AN OLD ONE ANSWERED

A newspaper advertisement spread over four columns caused a riot in New York a few days ago. The ad appeared Monday, giving special prices on women's suits, coats and dresses. At 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning the policeman on duty was compelled to telephone for help in handling the crowd. At noon 50 policemen were doing what they could to keep order among the 5,000 women that were storming the entrance of the already over-crowded store. The same condition prevailed throughout the day. We do not know anything about the values the store was offering, but we do know that the copy pulled and demonstrated what every business man should know—that newspaper advertising is read more carefully today than ever before and that the direct results from such advertisements are up to the advertiser and not the newspaper. The newspaper. The newspaper proves its power to create business every time the advertiser gives it an opportunity—it has the readers, they are ready to become interested, and all that is needed is a truthful, timely message.

A BOY'S PECULIARITIES

If you want to wreck a Vass boy's life, force him to hold his baby sister for half an hour each day and he'll become broken in spirit and will fade away and wither into an invalid beyond cure. If the young fellow is not imposed on in this manner he will grow and develop into a strong, healthy man, and when grown can sit and hold on his lap for hours without tiring a girl weighing all the way from 120 to 180 pounds. It is strange, but it is so, and we can quote a number of instances to prove that the theory is correct. A boy can run all day while at play, travel for miles and never think about being tired. But it is awful punishment to require him to run two blocks on an errand. We once knew a young man who walked seventeen miles to see his girl, but he couldn't stand it to follow a plow two hours. Another young fellow walked four miles across fields to "hook" watermelons, but several blocks was too far for him to walk to church. Yes, sir—boys are certainly peculiar.

REMEMBER THE DOUGH

Less than two months ago, Red Cross members in the eighth of the Southern Division, American Red Cross, sent more than 100 Christmas boxes to Brooklyn for shipment overseas to European countries. These boxes will be distributed to poor children at Christmas. Red Cross workers in Europe, many of them filled with holiday spirit, are many unfortunates.

As the Yuletide season approaches near, attention of the Red Cross in the South and other sections of the United States is being directed to the disabled ex-service men who spend Christmas in a government hospital ward—4,190 of them in thirteen hospitals situated in various parts of the country and 30,000 throughout the country.

The appreciation of efforts for Red Cross members to Christmas bright and cheery for men is shown in the following excerpt from a hospital report on entertainment features last year.

"Thanks to the out-of-town men we had the only mistletoe in the ward and a big bunch of holly tied with red ribbon on the edge of the bed. Loose clusters of holly leaves and big wreaths were hung in the halls."

Miss Verna Elsinger, director of the Junior Red Cross in the Southern Division, American Red Cross, has the names of the Red Cross members in charge at each hospital ward and a number of men confined to the hospital ward or Red Cross chairman in the states of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina and Tennessee. The men are urged to select the one of their preference and to cooperate with the Red Cross workers in carrying out the projects the Junior Red Cross undertakes.

Among the things suggested for Juniors to provide for the following:—

1. Individual stockings containing inexpensive gifts such as tooth brush and paste, soap, smokes, hard candies, raisins, figs, nuts, gum and other necessities.

2. Potted plants, phonographs, records, suitable books and games.
3. Scrap books, calendars cut from magazines and books of light weight covers, "Dorothy" (12 by 18 cretonne bags with string through top, in which to keep personal belongings such as cases for needles and pins, cretonne in gay colors.

4. Articles which add a touch to bed trays, and can be made by the children, such as cups, individual Christmas home-made Christmas cards.
5. For near by chapters entertainment of Christmas and other diversions.

It is suggested that the Junior Red Cross fills a box include a card with name and address, as the pleasure in writing personal letters and acknowledgements.

NEATNESS HELPS MARK

(By Miss Nora Bradshaw) To the consumer going to the store on the street to buy produce, the appearance of the man who is selling does not get attention as the appearance of the produce is offered for sale.

If you were on the market, wouldn't you be at the neatest displays where the produce was of good quality and nicely? Certainly you would.

There have been eggs displayed that did not sell because of dirt upon them. It is a matter to wash them. Pays in added trade and business.

Feeding for Winter

In order to obtain an abundance of eggs it is necessary to have a vigorous stock, properly fed.

The following are good conditions for the laying stock, conditions being by weight.
