I see by the papers that the county candidates are preparing for the political race. Let 'em go to it; to quote the Bard of Aberdeen:

For how can man do better Than bucking the machine, He can make the world his debtor, Though he's beat to smithereens."

Miss Lula McPherson, the only woman candidate, so far, in the race, is well qualified for register of deeds. Miss McPherson is from our town—Cameron; she has had six years experience in office work, having taught one year in business school, taught high school work for three years, made second highest grade in civil service in the state capital, is efficient, courteous and accommodating.

Mr. Hulan Thomasson and sister, Miss Nanny Lou, who have been attending school in Cameron, left on Sunday for their home near Aberdeen.

Mr. J. E. Phillips, one of our pioneer merchants and influential citizens, has moved into his new hardware store; it is a handsome and commodious building, being 50 feet front to 100 back, built of brick. He has "everything in the hardware line," and expects soon to add a handsome line of furniture.

The Young Ladies' Auxiliary met Wednesday with Misses Annie and Maggie McFadyen. After an interesting program, the mothers served cream and cake.

CAMERON HIGH SCHOOL

with its most excellent corps of teachers did itself proud this year, having eighteen graduates—thirteen sweet girl graduates and five promising looking youths; the commencement exercises were interesting and very beautiful. The stage was artistically decorated in the class colors of green and white, brilliantly lighted with electric lamps, while in front of the stage was a standard bearing the illuminated figures 24.

Salutatory, John C. Ferguson. Motion songs, 1st and 2nd grades.

Prologue in three acts—the Past, the Present, and the Future. Each speaker is introduced by Nannie Lou Thomasson. Class president, Annie Hollingsworth Jones; vice-president, Gladys Thomas; secretary, Carl Loving; treasurer, Mary Fannie Douglas; oration, Redin Barefoot; grumbler, Nonnie Norman; giftorian, Ila Flynn; colors, Alma Frye; historian, Hazel Rosser; prophet, Dora Boaz. Third act, with seniors talking on the stage. Third speaker, Pearl Douglas, says he would like to know what the future holds for the class of '24. He is told to "ask our prophet;" the prophet says she will try the witches of Macbeth and calls for music that will bring them forth. (Curtain.) Music. Curtain rises, showing three witches around a caldron; the prophet asks the weird sisters to reveal to the high school graduates their future. The witches begin their incantations, marching around the caldron repeating

"Double, double, toil and trouble Fire burn and caldron bubble." 1st witch—"I put into this brew all books both old and new."

2nd witch—"I put in all problems short and long They all must go, right or wrong."

3rd witch—All debates both old and new, Examinations and tests, too. Peace! The spell is wound up."

The witches leave, the prophet receives the scroll, saying "Here the future stands revealed." As she reads each name of the class, living figures pass across the stage, representing to each one their different vocations in life.

High School Notes The last few weeks of school were pleasant as well as busy, and the senior class was honored with quite a number of social affairs. On April 11, Miss Kate Arnold gave a delightful reception to members of the graduating class and invited guests; those present reported a most interesting and pleasant evening.

On the following Wednesday afternoon, members of the junior class gave a picnic in honor of the seniors at Thaggard's pond; the party was carried on Mr. McFayden's truck. Boat riding and strolling were in order until the supper was spread, the class colors, pink and green, being in evidence in the table decorations. The evening's merry making ended with a good old fashioned marshmallow toast.

Monday evening, April 21, Misses Lucile Rogers and Loula Loving entertained in honor of the graduating class at the home of the latter; the home was artistically decorated with pink and green. A "cat" contest and a bird guessing contest furnished amusement during the evening; in the first contest Miss Kate Arnold and Mr. Ira Twinley were winners of a cunning Easter basket full of pink and green mints; Mrs. Wicker and Miss
