The Adventures of Bessie Belle
Chapter III
Bessie Belle Escapes from the Giants Hand

Bessie Belle found it mighty hot in the giant's hand and could hardly stand on her feet as her shoes were so slippery. The giant was shouting, but his voice was so loud and gruff that Bessie Belle could not make out just what he was saying. His fingers were not closed very tight and so Bessie Belle, being well greased with butter quickly slipped through them and caught a strand of his hair (which seemed like heavy rope) and slipped down-down-down to the floor.

"Hello! See you're back again! Gracious, but you're mighty slippery!" ejaculated Pete Goblin.

"Why hello Mr. Pete Goblin! So glad to see you, My, oh my! But I have had a lucky escape. I do believe old Crusader meant to eat me!" and Bessie Belle grabbed up the corner of her apron with the intention of wiping the tears from her eyes but stopped as she found it just covered with butter.

"Looks to me as if he might had the 'tention too. He's got you pretty well all buttered up. Do take my handkerchief. Here 'tis." and Pete Goblin took something from his pocket which was very small and pink and cream colored and velvet looking and—to tell the truth it was a rose petal and Bessie Belle knew right away it would do her no good, so shaking her head replied, "Thank you Pete Goblin. You see your handkerchief is so dainty and sweet and 'er—tiny, I really must refuse."

"Oh goodness sakes! It does look kind of tiny, but you see as you use it, it will become larger. Everything is magic that belongs to a Goblin. Do just please try it. Wipe your eyes and then the butter from your dress." And Pete Goblin pressed the rose petal handkerchief into Bessie Belle's hand. She wiped her eyes and then sure enough as she proceeded to use it to wipe the butter from her dress it grew larger and acted just like a vacuum cleaner and fairly seemed to suck the butter from off her dress and shoes until she was spick and span clean again. And the funny part of it was, that the handkerchief was as clean as clean could be "My, oh my! It surely is a wonderful handkerchief. Thank you so much Mr. Pete Goblin." And Bessie Belle the magic handkerchief right by the corner and was in the act of returning it to Pete when a dainty little figure with long golden hair and a silver wand with a silver star on her forehead and a silver lace dress appeared and touched the magic handkerchief with her wand and almost instantly it disappeared, and so did Pete Goblin. Bessie Belle looked at the bright vision and exclaimed "My, oh, my! I know who you are."

Next week Bessie Belle meets Silver Lady. PINEBLUFF

Miss Dorothy Wallace a graduate of the Northfield College has returned to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Wallace after an absence of four years.

Many friends of P. H. Dearborn and Miss Helen Dearborn gathered at their home last Wednesday evening to bid them goodbye. After a period of seventeen years spent in Silver Springs and Pinebluff having sold their place to Mr. and Mrs. Kelly they are leaving for their old hometown in Pennsylvania. At the present time, Miss Helen stated, anyone wishing to correspond with them, might direct their letters to Waverley, Penn. as they expect to spend a short time there. A purse of fifteen dollars was presented to Miss Dearborn by her many friends. Miss Dearborn will be greatly missed as she was a very willing church worker an organist in the Pinebluff M. E. church. It is with regret and sorrow that their many friends see them leave.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Holder left last week to attend the Old Soldiers' Convention held in Georgia. Mr. Holder was sent as a delegate. They expect to be gone a few weeks sight seeing.

Edith Howie is visiting friends at Laurel Hill for a few weeks.

HEADLINERS AT THE CAROLINA THEATRES

Paramount's special production, "Forgotten Faces" which is coming to the Carolina Theatres on Friday and Saturday will have faces that are anything but forgotten in the Sandhills. Get together a cast of headliners including such stars as Clive Brook, Mary Brian, Baclanova, William Powell, Fred Kohler and Jack Liden and there is a dramatic treat in store for any audience, no matter what the picture is, but in this instance they are cast in an unusually powerful story, written by Richard Washburn Child. The theme is big, emotional. It has a strange, novel twist and a surprise finish, a swift, startling denouement to a tender drama. Amazing contrasts incorporated in a logical story that grips, with outstanding performance by a great aggregation of players makes "Forgotten Faces" an exceptional motion picture. Added attractions are Bobby Vernon in a two part comedy, "Stop Kidding," A Krazy Kat Cartoon "Baby Feud," a Color Classic, "The Red Man's Home" and the newest News.

"Forgotten Faces" will not soon be forgotten and is a worthy followup of outstanding pictures which the Carolina Theatres are showing this summer, among which have been "Harold Teen," "Happiness Ahead," "Four Walls," and "Warming Up."

Then, Monday and Tuesday will be remembered as "Joy Night." Anne Nichols' successful New York stage farce, "Just Married" which ran a year and a half on Broadway has been made into a picture and with what a cast! Ruth Taylor (of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" fame) James Hall, Harrison Ford, William Austin (the funny Englishman) Lila Lee, Tom Ricketts, Arthur Hoyt and Ivy Harris are only a part of the comedy cast that has been assembled for this picture.

"Just Married" is one of the most amusing farces that has ever come to the local screen. For sheer entertainment it has not been surpassed this season. The principal scenes take place aboard a ship at sea, with many hilarious situations involving a young bride-to-be, her fiancé, another suitor, and a young married couple.

The short subject program is also unusually interesting, containing a Max Davidson Comedy, "That Night," a Grantland Rice Golf Sportlight, "Bunker Battlers," an Aesops Fables and the newest News.

Another great week of entertainment is assured for the Patrons of the Carolina Theatres.

GROW BEEF CATTLE SAYS LIVESTOCK MAN

No other section can produce good quality beef cattle more economically than the South, and North Carolina in particular, for the reason that lands are still cheap, grazing is good, the pasture season is long, feed is produced at low cost and not much shelter is required.

"For these reasons we can start in the cattle business in this state with less capital than any other section," says Fred M. Haig, animal husbandry worker at State College. "Out of the twenty-five million acres of farm land in North Carolina, six million are being cultivated. This includes all of our pasture and hay land and thus there must be plenty of land left for grazing. Most of the 161,000 head of beef cattle now in the State are found in the western part where the land is rough and grass grows readily. Still the eastern portion also offers possibilities to the man who may grow his beef as a sideline to crop farming."

Prof. Haig finds that many crop farmers of the east are already turning to dairying with success and he believes that the raising of a few beef animals would add to the income. The small amount of labor required would come in the fall after crop is over. Feeding beef cattle works along well with hog growing and the manure secured will add to the fertility of the land.

However, Prof. Haig cautions the beginner to start slowly and gradually add to his beef cattle herd as he becomes more familiar with feeding and marketing methods. One sure rule to follow is not to attempt feeding more cattle than the corn and hay grown on the farm will supply. In many sections where cattle feeding has been started, the grower starts with only a few animals and markets his surplus locally. If the market is not satisfactory, he may combine with a neighbor and ship a car to the larger livestock markets. This same method is being used successfully by hundreds of swine growers all over the State.

Four hundred and ninety-four club members attended the four meetings held in Craven County last month.

Enough hogs are on feed in Columbus county to ship two cars this fall, and other demonstrations are being arranged by the county agent.

A new milk route has been established in Yadkin county. The farmers are selling whole milk instead of cream.

Continued wet weather this spring has reduced the corn crop of Stanly county.

New Sawmill AT Pinehurst Lumber Yards

Pinehursts, N. C.

So many calls are received for unusual sizes of lumber in small amounts for quick delivery that the Pinehurst Lumber Yards are negotiating for a new mill to be set up at the Lumber Yards, to cut anything that may be called for. Although the Yards have the output of several mills frequently little or odd, or big or unusual things are called for, and with timber on the property and a mill to cut it the Lumber Yards can cut a few logs and almost saw out what you want while you wait.
