SERVICE RENDERED BY THE CHURCH

(The first of a series of talks on Church Attendance, sponsored by the Sandhills Kiwanis Club.)

The public school renders its service of providing budding citizens with facts, mental training and manual skill. The public utilities and the merchants supply gas, water, power, food, clothing.

The Church, too, has something to supply for the needs of normal life—far beyond a warm building and comfortable pews in which to rest and enjoy good music and stimulating sermons. It supplies ideals, purposes, inspiration, joy, power. It teaches its members how to use most wisely all possessions. It teaches of man's noble spiritual heritage, and gives him contact with the Source of Life, for his refreshment and strengthening.

For these benefits bestowed, the Church merits loyal support. Justly recognize service rendered.

"TOO YOUNG TO DIE—YET"

The Pilot is indebted to Good Housekeeping Magazine for permission to reprint this editorial in support of the Christmas Seal Sale, now on throughout Moore county:

"I'm too young to die yet," protested a young woman when the speedometer of the automobile in which she was a passenger jumped to sixty. The driver intimated that she was out of touch with the times, but she replied, "Neither your brakes nor your brains work fast enough to prevent an accident if anything should go wrong when a car is making a mile a minute." She was right, of course; the yearly toll of highway deaths, a goodly proportion of them caused by speeding, proves that she was right. And because the driver very much wanted to get that young woman home safely, he cut the speed to a safer level—and held it there. Neither the girl nor the driver was afraid of it. It wasn't that; it just suddenly seemed the sensible thing not to take chances when the few minutes to be gained made no difference. Perhaps—just perhaps—the fact that the young woman's life had been threatened and she had had to slow down to save it made it seem all the more precious that sunny October morning, when the colors blazed on all the hills—signifying the death the trees must die before they could put on their mantles of living beauty again.

"I'm too young to die yet!" No doubt those words express, too, the rebellion in the hearts of the tens of thousands of young people who die each year from tuberculosis—the greatest foe of the young, particularly young women. The death rate from tuberculosis has been cut to less than one-third of what it was thirty years ago, when it was the leading cause of death. Yet when we analyze these deaths, we find that tuberculosis is still the leading cause of death for men and women between 15 and 45 years of age. Between 15 and 45—the years of greatest productivity, the years of greatest usefulness—and perhaps of happiness. But, analyzing the figures a bit further, we find that among young women between 15 and 30 one in every four deaths is from this highly contagious disease.

And these deaths are just as needless as are the deaths caused by speeding on the highway. Slow Down is the remedy indicated in both cases. There is little else to be done for tuberculosis; in most instances, fortunately, that is sufficient. Unchecked, TB marches straight on to the high death rate indicated above, but it is the most easily checked of all minor diseases. As we have said again and again on this page—said with all the experience and authority of medical science on our side—tuberculosis can be cured. But it must be combatted early; once a real foothold has been established, it hangs on and on. And it spreads and spreads; tuberculosis is a "highly contagious disease." Every case of tuberculosis comes from another, frequently in the family.

So the fight against tuberculosis must go on. And it is going on. The National Tuberculosis Association is organized in every state in the Union. Its campaign is a continuous one; year in, year out, it presses the foe back wherever it has the cooperation of the potential victims. And every year it gives us all a chance to help by buying—and using—those little symbols of hope, the Christmas Seals. For thirty years these seals have been spreading the message that tuberculosis can be cured. If you buy and use them generously from now till Christmas, you will be doing your part to reduce the number of those who, wanting to live, can only say, "I'm too young to die yet."

SENATOR GLASS' TWO-MINUTE SPEECH

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia takes his stand firmly by the side of "constitutional government as opposed to political expedience" in a statement in New York. Speaking as guest of honor at the 122d dinner of the Economic Club of New York City at the Hotel Astor, a banquet attended by 1,300 leaders in finance, industry and commerce, the Secretary of the Treasury in Woodrow Wilson's cabinet was on his feet just two minutes.

When called upon, the Senator explained that his remarks might be a little out of place because he is "totally in disagreement with nearly everything that has been done" by the New Deal at Washington and, further, because he opposes "everything that is now proposed to be done." Then he added:

"I believe in the fundamentals of constitutional government and not in mere political expedience. I note that the subject of the discussion tonight is 'Balancing the National Budget.' Well, it may be that the distinguished Assistant Secretary of the Treasury (Wayne C. Taylor) will be able to tell you gentlemen when and how that will be done; but I prophesy in advance of his address, however clever and accomplished it may be, that it can never be done by undertaking to spend the nation into prosperity. Well, I am going to quit right here."

The Senator echoed the sentiments of a large element in the country today.

No budget was ever balanced by constantly dipping into the red ink bottle.

HELD FOR SUPERIOR COURT FOR ALLEGED CAR THEFT

D. McLean.

GRAINS OF SAND

A father of three children has enrolled in the Highfalls High School, Katherine Shields of Carthage writes. His name is Arter Martindale, an employe of the Highfalls Cotton Mill. His shift at the mill which lasts from 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon until 11:00 o'clock at night, leaves him with plenty of spare time on his hands, so he decided to go to school and acquire more knowledge. The authorities consented and he is now a full-fledged student. Mr. Martindale took a business course in Winston-Salem a short while after he was married 14 years ago.

The Library of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill now has a total of 350,000 volumes, representing an addition of 20,000 since last year.

One of the most important road signs the North Carolina Highway Commission ever put up are the ones now stationed at the base of every hill admonishing the motorist to stay in single line. The sign stands out boldly in its warning emphasis and should be an important factor in discouraging the driver who is prone to rush to the crest of a hill abreast of another automobile. If such signs are heeded or enforced it should go away with untangling some of the scrambled mixtures that take place where vision has been obscured or obstructed.

The calendar says next week marks the beginning of winter. It comes as a bit of irony after the last week or two, but to take the gloom out of such ideas, several January magazines have put in their appearance with early Spring fashions. Time out for a shudder.

A Southern Pines man, not as a rule given to hobbies, is keeping a mental record of remarks made by automobile drivers commenting on our new traffic lights. His hobby so far shows an interesting combination of words both for and against, a few of the "against" unprintable in a conservative family journal.

It's 621 miles from Manteo to Murphy, if you use the State's best highways and a car which averages 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline. The gasoline tax adds up to $2.17 for the trip.

The average motorist pays an average of something more than $50.00 a year in automobile taxes, most of which are on his fuel.
