Public Is Asked For Ideas to Restore Prosperity to the U. S.

We won't agree on the meaning of words. What one man calls an "abuse" in finance, another believes to be an inviolate right.

Nevertheless, we all would agree to these general objectives.

Now there is no determined method of obtaining them. Old quarrels and partisanship, fixed ideas and established customs cannot provide adequate answers. Manifestly we must use our best brains, our best training and experience, and our most disinterested and informed minds to make use of all the new information assembled and experiments tried. We must adopt the accurate, ratatory to the social sciences.

What I want to point out to the people of Moore county is that this is precisely what the Republican party is now endeavoring to do.

The time has gone by when a responsible political party can represent one interest, or one group, or one section. The old labels are gone with the wind.

So the Republican party has invited leaders of thought and action from every section and every walk of life, to contribute to an unbiased, temperate, and accurate study of how best to accomplish these results. They are not seeking a Republican way. They are seeking the right way.

For political ballyhoo purposes it seems inevitable that in campaigns the other fellow's solutions should be called names. But in making this program we are not interested in abusing Mr. Roosevelt's or Mr. Thomas' or Mr. George's answers. When they appear to the general intelligence to be the best available we will adopt them. In truth no body of men can invent a new world. All they can or expect to do is to mobilize the best that we know, from all sources, and present that.

The Answers Wanted

I am on the junior committee for this state. We would appreciate—and the Nation would appreciate—the contribution of the thought of all citizens in the details they are most familiar with. Democrats are just as concerned as Republicans. If we lack knowledge or wisdom, and advance a program that does not help this great American dream, it will serve no good purpose to anyone. And if we can, by tolerance and study and understanding arrive at better answers than the administration, that will be to the advantage of every American. We do not want criticisms, we want answers.

Last month, for instance, we assembled farmers and economists and idealists and statisticians to try to formulate a policy that would solve the problem of farm prices. Everyone knows the problem. We grow or can easily grow more tobacco, cotton, wheat, and rice (and maybe other things) than the farmers can market at a profit. For lack of a better answer we are wrangling over a system of production controls.

Well, anybody can find trouble with this scheme. But who can produce a better answer? We expect to get a better answer. To that end we are ready to listen to anybody.

For instance it has been suggested that the attempt to make quotas for every farm is really too complicated to be worked with fairness. Possibly, then, the same result might be obtained at no more cost by the Government's leasing a proportion of all tillable land and taking it out of production.—Well, maybe that's a bad idea. The point isn't to fasten onto an idea and make an issue of it. The point is to consider every possible idea, and adopt the best.

Any suggestions?

Do you believe in collective bargaining? It is pretty well established as a national policy by the Wagner Act. Now it's all very well to inveigh against this act. But what we need is not a string of adjectives. The problem is to amend this Act in such wise as to discourage violence and jurisdictional battle between unions, and at the same time be sure that the amendment is not used to really prevent real collective bargaining, or to destroy any of the recognized rights of workmen. Any suggestions?

Work Relief

Here is work relief. Everybody agrees it should be non-partisan and out of politics, but saying that doesn't help. What guarantee have we that Conservative Democrats or Republicans would take it out of politics? A definite method, not a pious resolution, must be devised.

Will transferring administration to localities do the trick? Some think so. But there is no reason to make this a holy cause until we examine it in detail. And perhaps the human mind can find a better alternative. If, so that's what the Republican party will adopt.

Shall we undertake to balance the National budget at once? Or in two years? Or when conditions warrant? At present we think that a vigorous and determined effort should be made to insure it's balance within a definite period. This, however, involves both cutting expenses, and new taxes. Both of these are unpopular measures. And so take courage and also understanding and support of the people. Will Moore county support this program? If not, what is a better one?

The Republican party is today not asking for your votes. It's asking for your ideas and your sincere convictions of what is best for the entire country. When we have assembled an answer we will present it, and ask you to compare it with the other fellow's. If then you can truly say he cares more for the unity of purpose of all the people, more for social justice, more for the welfare of farmer or workman or the underprivileged or anyone else, then vote for him. For we believe there is only one interest—and properly understood it best serves every citizen.

Theatre

"The King and Queen of terpsichore are together again! Never before such dancing; never before such haunting heart-songs; never before such sparkling romance; never before such lively merriment; never before such a show like 'Carefree.'" The foregoing is a quotation from one of the Hollywood noted reviewers after seeing Fred Astaire's and Ginger Rogers' new production, "Carefree," the attraction at the Southern Pines Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 19, 20, 21, with a Tuesday matinee.

Here's a supercharged musical bombshell jammed with brilliant, lightning-fast routines by the King and Queen of terpsichore; a quartet of matchless melodies by America's number one song scribe, Irving Berlin; novelty devices galore; a story crammed with gleeful surprises; lavish sets and clever dance ensembles, among which are their new dance the "Yam," which threatens to sweep the country. In short; You'll get dancing to your heart's content—drifting your dreams to a whirling world of joy and gladness, giving you a day of love and life and happy laughter, with Fred and Ginger, singing, swinging with rhythmic romance ringing, sweeping you into the grand new show that tops the top of all their hits.

The brothers Warner, lately in the news as pledged to give "off-season" magnetic merchandise to off-set seasonal slump, have made good in Spades as pertains to "Four's A Crowd," the attraction for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, September 22, 23, 24, with a Saturday matinee. It is a headlong comedy constructed of new plot materials and festooned with as fine a roster of marquee names as the most exacting audience can ask for at any time of the year. Among those present are Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Rosalind Russell, Patrick Knowles, Walter Connolly, Hugh Herbert, Franklin Pangborn, Melville Cooper and Herman Bing. The production is high class and full of subtle humor which will go over big with sophisticated audiences.

The hero of Wallace Sullivan's story is a public relations counsel of the kind the late Ivy Lee was. In it he does for a millionaire the kind of things that genius did for a real one. The scene is New York, the time is now, the people are such as live and work out their destinies at this place and time and the action is swift, varied and of a kind completely appropriate for the period.

JOHNNY ALLEN ORDERED TO REST PITCHING ARM

The pitching arm that brought Johnny Allen, formerly of Aberdeen, 15 consecutive victories in 1937 is "through" for the season, because of a chipped bone in the elbow.

The Cleveland Indians management announced that X-ray examinations disclosed the nature of an injury suffered by Johnny while pitching to Ducky Medwick in the All-Star game in July.

Allen, who used to clerk at the Aberdeen Hotel, will return to his St. Petersburg, Fla., home for a "long rest" prescribed by his doctors. Further examination and treatment is scheduled later this fall. An operation may be necessary.
