

POLIO EPIDEMIC UNLIKELY IN N. C., SAYS DR. REYNOLDS

State Health Department Head Does Not Fear Outbreak But Is Taking Precautions

134 CASES IN S. C.

With 134 cases of poliomyelitis in South Carolina, mostly in Charleston, precautions are being taken in this state against an outbreak of a repetition of the epidemic so serious here in 1935. Though the epidemic in South Carolina is still increasing, there is, according to Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, head of the North Carolina Department of Health, no acute concern in this state. In a statement to The Pilot Dr. Reynolds says:

"North Carolina recognizes that an increase in the prevalence of poliomyelitis—infantile paralysis—now exists in certain sections of South Carolina. While we do not anticipate any widespread prevalence in this state, we wish to be on the alert for the development of any cases in our border counties which may have any particular epidemiological connection with cases in South Carolina.

"Health authorities in our border counties in North Carolina have been notified to be on the careful watch for potential cases coming within their territory, giving their careful attention to such cases over a period of two weeks. It is definitely understood, however, that no quarantine regulations or restrictions have been advocated by this office for the traveling public. We have encouraged the health authorities of the State of North Carolina to observe over a period of two weeks individuals coming out of areas where the prevalence of the disease is high. If more rigid instructions are thought to be justified in any special counties of the state, this is a matter within the jurisdiction of local authorities.

Fears No Outbreak

"When I say we do not fear any widespread outbreak, I mean simply this: If history repeats itself, as is customary in such epidemics, the epidemic of 1935 affords protection to the citizens of North Carolina, with the exception of those born since that period. Analyzing the situation, we have had approximately 320,000 births over the four-year period, of whom 277,000 are now living which, on the percentage basis, means that eight percent of the total population is susceptible, which is far below the average number of susceptibles which would justify or anticipate an epidemic. It must be understood, however, that this is a mere guess, but we believe it is based on a logical assumption. The conclusion would be, if correct, that North Carolina stands to an advantageous position and that we and the traveling public have little to fear. But we must always be mindful of the potential sources of danger and guard against them."

TO MAKE CROP SURVEYS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTY

A supervisor's school for the purpose of training a group of men to measure crop land preparatory to a county-wide survey to determine the degree of compliance with soil conservation and AAA allotments will be held in Carthage today and Saturday. R. F. Lowery of Cameron will be in charge of the work.

Assistant County Agent W. G. Caldwell said 12 to 15 workers would be trained in the school and that after their approval the survey will begin, probably some time next week, if aerial maps arrive in time.

The survey, which will require at least six weeks for completion is made for the purpose of determining what benefits a farmer will receive under the conservation program or what penalties shall be applied. In the case of cotton where quotas are in effect, quotas will be on basis of poundage per acre if the survey shows allotment is overplanted.

Area devoted to crops will be checked by aerial maps and the actual acreage determined in most cases by scale measurements. Caldwell said this method had proved more accurate than land measurements.

TECHNICAL VIOLATION

A technical violation of the State Labor laws was charged against the Southern Pines Laundry in a case in Recorder's Court at Carthage this week, which officials of the company state has now been corrected.

"Masterly," Says Talbot Johnson of World's Fair

Like Trip Around World to Visit Exhibits of Foreign Nations.—Not Expensive

Talbot Johnson of Aberdeen told the Sandhills Kiwanis Club that the New York World's Fair is "the most masterly thing I ever hope to see" at the weekly meeting held Wednesday in the Presbyterian Church in Aberdeen. He described principally costs. His license to drive was revoked for twelve months.

A case against Gaston Shaw, colored, charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, was continued to next week and bond was fixed at $500.

Doca Garner, white, convicted of non-support in November, 1938, and let off with the costs on account of the fact that he had gone back to his wife and children, is to be allowed to pay the remainder of the costs in installments of $8 at intervals of two weeks, it appearing that he is living with and supporting his family.

the exhibits of foreign nations, which have spent $35,000,000 at the fair. There are 60 nations represented and it is like taking a trip around the world to visit them, he said.

Mr. Johnson spoke in high praise of the United States Building which, he stated, was designed by Aymar Embury III, architect of many Southern Pines homes and buildings, including the postoffice and new library.

The cost of a visit to the fair is not excessive, despite reports to the contrary, Mr. Johnson said. There are any number of places where meals may be had at reasonable prices, and most everything one wants to see, and should see, is free. He was greatly impressed by the railroad exhibits, which shows locomotives from the first in this country to the mammoth anticipated streamliner of 1960. He said the North Carolina exhibit was excellent and attracting thousands. Mr. Johnson's daughter, Miss Miriam, is chief hostess and is kept busy entertaining the visitors, but enjoying it, he stated.
