

Third of 1,700 Farms in County Measured

Soil Conservation Program Here Well Along, County Agent Garrison Reports

Approximately one-third of the more than 1,700 farms in Moore county have been measured under the soil conservation program, County Agent E. H. Garrison, Jr., reports.

Work is being rushed as rapidly as possible in order to complete the measurement before schools and colleges open in September as the majority of those doing the field work will return to school in the fall.

Reports on the cotton planted in the county must be in by August and work is being rushed especially on these. Tobacco and grain reports may be turned in later.

Note book fillers, typewriter and second sheet packets 5 cents at Hayes.
