

Social Security Act Explained in Report

County Welfare Superintendent Outlines Provisions Due To Misunderstandings

Misunderstandings on the part of persons desiring to secure Social Security and wanting to know exactly the provisions of the Act last week prompted Mrs. Gilliam Brown, Moore County welfare superintendent, to issue a concise report concerning the Social Security Act, its function and its purpose.

The Social Security Act, enacted in 1935, provides three types of governmental services. These are: (1) Social Insurance, Unemployment Compensation, unemployment insurance and old age benefits, old age insurance; (2) Public Assistance—federal grants-in-aid to the states for three types of category relief, aid to dependent children, (mother's aid), old age assistance and aid to the blind; (3) Other health, welfare and vocational services—maternal and child health, public health work, services for crippled children, child welfare services, (rural child welfare programs) and vocational rehabilitation. An executive body, the Social Security Board, is charged with the administration of the social insurance and public assistance provisions of the Act. The other functions are allocated among the United States Children's Bureau, the United States Office of Education and the United States Public Health Service.

The Act established the conditions under which grants are to be made by the Federal Government to the states for the three types of public assistance embraced by the law and stated in the above paragraph. It is specifically stated in the law that no distinctions are to be made because of race, color, financial or physical status, or political or religious affiliation. Any persons making any distinctions because of these things is removed from the office by the Social Security Board.

Eligibility to receive or to continue to receive assistance is determined by diligence in seeking work and by willingness to accept it if offered. Two methods are pursued to make sure that employable workers seek every possible work opportunity. One is to throw upon the worker the burden of the proof. He may be required to submit signed statements, from a specified number of employers cer-

Theatre

Through the night rides a masked adventurer... the jagged mark of his sword striking terror to every heart but one. In the most famous and colorful of all screen roles, Tyrone Power brings to thrilling life the exploits of the celebrated bandit in his latest starring picture, "The Mark of Zoro," the attraction at the Pinehurst Theatre Sunday night, November 10th, and at the Southern Pines Theatre Monday and Tuesday, November 11, 12, with a Tuesday matinee. Boasting the most spectacular action and sword play the screen has seen in many a moon, Power's role is crammed with hard riding, furious fighting, ardent romance and highlighted by an unforgettable realistic duel with Basil Rathbone. Featured with Rathbone at the head of the brilliant supporting cast is lovely Linda Darnell as the fairest senorita in old California who remembered that a previous production of "The Mark of Zoro," brought screen fame to the late Douglas Fairbanks.

Plucked from its distinguished in the Hall of Fame of America's great legitimate stage plays, Sidney Howard's Pulitzer Prize winner, "They Knew What They Wanted," has been translated to the screen in moving and powerful terms, and is the attraction at the Southern Pines Theatre Wednesday and Thursday, November 13, 14, with a Thursday matinee. For sheer dramatic intensity, for inspired performances on the part of its principals, here is a picture that stands out in bold relief.

In reviewing this production, one critic states that "At last we realize that Broadway theatre audiences knew what they wanted when they made this Sidney Howard play one of the smash hits of New York theatrical history. 'They Knew What They Wanted,' even diluted for censor purposes for the screen, is powerful as drama, emotionally touching as romance, and provoking as sugar-coated preachment. To Charles Laughton goes the honor of creating another mighty role, that of Tony, the Napa County wine grower, beloved by all, possessing all the happiness he desires—except a wife and bambino."

Add another laurel to Carole Lombard, whose role makes demands upon her very different from her recent pictures and who returns favor by turning in a poignant portrayal of the waitress in a San Francisco spaghetti joint. "They Knew What They Wanted" is not recommended for children.

From the widely read and much discussed novel of Ethel Vance, "Escape" has been faithfully produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Norma Shearer as the countess, Robert Taylor as the son, and Nazimova as Taylor's mother, and is the attraction for a special showing at the Pinehurst Theatre Wednesday, November 13th, at 3:00 and 8:30 p. m., and at the Southern Pines Theatre Friday and Saturday, November 15, 16, with a Saturday matinee.

Further dealings with matters despotic in dictator regions are presented in this picturization of the "best sellers" of the same name. Concerned with the frantic efforts of an American son to save his Cermon-born mother from the death penalty, the screen adaptation preserves the melodramatic pace and suspense of the original novel and in addition presents the stars of the piece, Norma Shearer and Robert Taylor, in performances that match in persuasive perfection and power any of their previous portrayals.
