Vass-Lakeview Students Put On A Successful Agricultural Fair

Numerous Prizes Awarded for Splendid Exhibits by Mr. Gladstone's Pupils

Pronounced by some as the best school fair they had ever seen, the exhibits arranged by students of the vocational agriculture department of Vass-Lakeview School attracted a large number of visitors on Thursday and Friday of last week and reflected credit on the entire vocational agriculture department of which W. E. Gladstone is director.

The exhibits covered every phase of work carried on in the department and taught many lessons that were beneficial to farmers. The various booths were arranged by teams of boys, and those competing for prizes were in three groups.

The winners were as follows:

Group 1: Soil Erosion, Oscar Klingenschmidt and Wayne Thomas, 1st; Soil Building, Curtis Everett and Raymond Garner, 2nd; Sweet Potatoes, Thurman Doss, 3rd; Seeds, Wayne Blue and James Stevens, 4th. Group 2: "Grow More Grain" both, A. B. Parker, Jr., and Neil Johnson, 1st; Poultry, including proper grading and marketing of eggs and capons, Robert Hendricks, Kenneth Womack, Franklin Gilliland and Lester Garner, 2nd; Corn, Buster Jessup, Douglas McFadyen and Jack Blevins, 3rd.

Group 3: Operation of lathe, Paul Caddell, 1st; Tool sharpening, Graham Bailey, Odell Wooten, Charles Priest and Franklin Gilliland, 2nd; Tin shop, Buster Blue and Buddie McRae, 3rd.

In these booths the boys were working at the different phases of questioned by the judges.

The woodwork exhibits ranked as follows: 1st, Raymond Garner; 2nd, Paul Caddell; 3rd, Curtis Everett; 4th, Buster Blue; 5th, James Stevens.

The judges were E. H. Garrison, county agent; F. E. Peebles, vocational instructor, Carthage; O. B. Pullen, vocational instructor, Cameron.

Three additional school booths, one by the high school, one by the grammar grades and a third by the primary department were of outstanding interest, but were not competing for prizes.

The high school exhibit's central feature was "The Village of Raveloe" by the ninth grade, and there were interesting entries from the French, biology, chemistry and geometry sections.

"Our Nature Corner" was arranged by the grammar grades and in it were dozens of interesting exhibits including birds' nests, a hornet's nest, many varieties of woad, berries, nuts live squirrels and rabbits, a lemon tree and many other interesting things. A short pine twig bearing around thirty-six pine cones so closely massed that it was almost impossible to count them was on display.

The primary grades' booth held excellent specimens of work done by the little folk.

A WPA Adult Education booth attracted much attention with its pine needle baskets, furniture made from odds and ends, plaques, and needlework.

The Woman's Club booth centered around the school lunch project, and there were beautiful potted plants and cut flowers on exhibit.

A Boy Scout Booth and another by shop work and were observed and the Future Farmers of America were also instructive and interesting.

This is the second son and fifth child.

INCINERATOR A MENACE, CLAIM IN DAMAGE SUIT

Complaining that an incinerator operated by Chandler and Farlow Lumber Company near Carthage is a public nuisance, E. C. Fry, whose home is within a few yards of the incinerator, according to the allegations, is asking that the defendant be restrained from using the incinerator and that the plaintiff be allowed $2,000 damages to his property.

Plaintiff Fry alleges that the incinerator is in a very dilapidated condition and that burnt particles from it are constantly lighting on his house; that on dry, windy nights he has been forced to sit up late to guard his property to keep the incinerator from setting fire to his house. He further complains that fine particles of burnt material blow over the community and have sifted into his well, making it almost impossible to get clear drinking water from the well, and that his property is terribly smoked up with cinders, soot and ashes.
