Dr. Collins Speaks In Carthage At Farm Bureau Meet

Monday night September 2 there was a mass meeting of farmers in the Court Room. The purpose of the meeting was to get the latest information on production of small grain and at the same time make plans for starting our Farm Bureau Campaign.

Dr. R. Collins, Extension Agronomist from State College was the principal speaker. Dr. Collins has done excellent work on the production of corn throughout, particularly Hybrids.

A small grain program is now being started all over the State. With the food and feed situation as it is now, it is felt to be up to everyone to make each acre count for the most. This meeting and the information which Dr. Collins has will be available to all farmers of Moore County and all are urged to attend.

Dr. Collins illustrated his talk with a series of pictures showing different varieties; methods of fertilization, etc. There were many farmers of the County who attended and brought friends with them to hear the instructive and helpful information presented by Dr. Collins.
