UN and YOU

By ELEANOR MITCHEL

New York . . . They had come from the Rocky Mountain area, from Alabama, California, Michigan—as a matter of fact, every section of the country was represented. It was a nation-wide meeting of field directors of the American Association for the United Nations, and heads of branches of the organization had gathered in New York City for it.

In a nutshell, the AAUN national headquarters is here, but chapters to carry on educational activities—not political—non-partisan—non-profit—are spread throughout the country. They all go about their daily business of just trying to help the United Nations—and their help is primarily in the form of explaining what it's all about. They aim purely and simply to build public opinion for the UN. Man's mind has got to be thinking about a problem before that problem gets solved. Just as the need for a new community center or church organ has to have public backing—and this time I don't mean financial—so does the need for security and peace through the United Nations need public attention.

So, the AAUN and its chapters print lucid literature, supply speakers who know what they're talking about, hold mass meetings, gather and impart information on documentary films, arrange discussion groups on UN problems and work with high school and college students. In short, they serve as the people's link with the United Nations.

Well, at this conference, they came from Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maryland, Kansas, Iowa, Ohio, and Minnesota to discuss ways and means of carrying out their program and services. I sat in on these sessions, and heard people who have devoted many years to work for collective security, talk the current situation over with new leaders who are young veterans and college students ready to carry on. The Board of Directors of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations was on hand to offer worthwhile suggestions, and when one hears them, one says three cheers for youth.

PINHEAD SKETCH . . . Sir Carl August Berendsen, 56, Chairman of New Zealand delegation to the General Assembly. Is also chairman of the UN Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Committee. Lawyer by profession. Son of a farmer. Is his country's minister to Washington. His eyebrows are heavier than John L. Lewis'.

ALSO . . . By a form of remote control, so to speak, I was in on the raising of the flags of the three new member nations. A "spy" out at Flushing Meadows kept telephoning to give me a blow-by-blow description of what was happening. At 11:45 on November 19, the Swedish banner went up, the third alphabetically after Afghanistan and Iceland. Immediately following, Rockefeller Center raised the three flags over its plaza and skating rink. . . UNRRA Director General LaGuardia has estimated that 400 million dollars is needed this coming year to help feed the people of the world when UNRRA folds up December 31, 1946. He proposed that the U. S. contribute 49% to the new fund as compared with 72% given UNRRA. The question now is whether relief should be given to starving people through the United Nations or be handled by each donor nation independently. The U. S., richest country and non-invaded, is of course in the spotlight on this question. . .

Christian Scientists Observe Thanksgiving

The Christian Science society in Southern Pines held their usual Thanksgiving service on Thanksgiving Day at 11 a. m., conducted by the first reader, Miss Carrie Conneley.

The Thanksgiving proclamation by the President of the United States was a part of the service.

"Thanksgiving" was the subject of the lesson-sermon. The text was from Colossians 3:15. "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful."

Selections from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following: "Are we really grateful for the good already received? Then we shall avail ourselves of the blessings we have, and thus be fitted to receive more. Gratitude is much more than a verbal expression of thanks".

Baptist Church Ends Week Of Prayer Today

A Week of Prayer for foreign missions was completed this morning, Friday, at the First Baptist church when Mrs. C. C. Kennedy spoke on "Christmas for Christ" and the opportunity to share with less fortunate people.

The week was sponsored by the Women's Missionary society, beginning Tuesday evening when Mrs. Kennedy led the meditation on the Chinese and Japanese. Rev. J. Lamar Jackson, the new pastor, focused attention of the group on Africa and South America at the Wednesday evening meeting, and Mrs. Kennedy concluded the week at the Friday morning discussion.
