

County Polio Leaders Meet To Inaugurate 1953 March of Dimes

"Moore county has always gone far beyond its quota in the annual polio campaign and we plan to do as well or better this year," County Chairman Paul C. Butler tells county chapter and campaign officials at the kickoff meeting for the 1953 March of Dimes, held at the Dixie Inn at Vass.

He is seen above seated third from left, beside Campaign Chairman H. Clifton Blue, host at the dinner meeting. All officers and directors were reelected at the meeting, and community campaign leaders accepted their quotas totaling $7,540 for the county as a whole.

"Compassionate Transfer" Is Granted To Return Marine To Stateside Duty

The sister of Jimmy, who is a fine upstanding Marine stationed in Korea, came into the Red Cross office asking that he be notified of the critical illness of his father.

According to Red Cross regulations, the worker talked with the doctor, who stated the father had had a cerebral hemorrhage and was paralyzed; that the outlook was grave, and that he recommended that Jimmy return to the States. Because Jimmy's unit was moving about rapidly, it was difficult for the Red Cross field director in Korea to make contact with him. Yet one week later, word was received that Jimmy was on his way home.

Upon his return, Jimmy realized that his father would never be able to work again to support the mother, two school-age brothers and two little sisters. While he did not want to leave the Marine Corps, Jimmy knew that he owed a duty to his family. On pondering over his problem, his sister suggested that he visit the Red Cross chapter which had helped her. Maybe they could help him too. So Jimmy went to the chapter house.

After listening sympathetically, the Red Cross worker realized that Jimmy would need time to plan for the future of his family, and she suggested that he wire his commanding officer for an extension of his leave. Jimmy had not known that this could be done, but was relieved to be able to send the wire. Military authorities granted him an extension of 15 days.

Then the Red Cross worker discussed all phases of his problem with him and he discovered to his surprise that he could apply for what is termed a "compassionate transfer" for duty in the United States. Such a transfer is given by the military only under very special circumstances of distress.

The conditions for applying for such a transfer included Jimmy's own personal request, the doctor's statement of his father's health, and affidavits from several other people. Jimmy was told to discuss this matter with his family, and was also told he must be the one to make the decision.

A few days later he returned to the Red Cross office with all the necessary papers and said he had decided to apply for the compassionate transfer because he would be easier in his mind about his family if he were stationed in the United States. The Red Cross workers sorted out the papers and typed them neatly, had them notarized and gave them to Jimmy to mail to the Adjutant General's office in Washington, D. C. The decision lay now with the military authorities; they alone could make the final decision. Red Cross had done its part. The military authorities apparently understood, for in two weeks Jimmy received a telegram to report at the end of his leave to a Marine base in the state, not too far from his home.

A greatly relieved Martine is now at his new base, working with renewed vigor because his mind is free. We all know that a happy soldier is a good soldier. As Jimmy said in parting, "This could not have happened to me without the services of the Red Cross."

Mrs. Jane Carter Opens Art Studio At "The Foxhole"

Mrs. Jane Carter, accomplished young artist who has lived in Southern Pines since last April, is opening a studio and workshop this week at "The Foxhole," on East Pennsylvania avenue.

She will teach a weekly class in still life and landscape watercolor painting, with classes for children and teen-agers on Saturdays.

Mrs. Carter is the wife of Lieut. Col. Sam Carter, Judge Advocate

General of the Ninth Air Force at Pope AFB, Fort Bragg.

She is a journalism graduate of West Virginia university, and studied portrait painting at the Maryland Institute in Baltimore, and with Robert Breckman at the Art Students League in New York City. She also studied in New York with Jon Corbino.

During an Army tour in Palm Beach, Fla., she taught landscape painting and children's classes at Norton Gallery in West Palm Beach, and also studied with watercolorist Ellicott O'Hara.

She taught in South Carolina during a stay there, and now instructs the weekly art classes of the Fort Bragg Woman's club.

Watercolor scenes of South Carolina painted by Mrs. Carter were displayed in Jack's Grill last summer, and have now been replaced by a series of watercolors which she did in Germany in 1943, while with her husband stationed at Wiesbaden and in Bavaria.

Her work has been exhibited in a number of eastern shows, and at the Corback Gallery in New York.

For information about her classes, Mrs. Carter may be reached at 2-8362.
