Mrs. Powers, 78,

Succumbs After Short Illness

Mrs. Ella Mae Ramey Powers, 78, mother of Mrs. Dwight W. Winkelman and Miss Lee Powers, of Southern Pines, died Sunday night in Moore County Hospital after a short illness.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the Powell Funeral Home, conducted by the Rev. C. E. B. Robinson, Episcopal rector of Rockingham, in the absence of the Rev. Charles V. Covell, rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church here, who was out of town on vacation. According to Mrs. Powers' expressed wish, her body was cremated this week and her ashes are to be buried at Mount Hope Cemetery here.

Born in Kentucky, Mrs. Powers had lived in Indiana, Chicago, Ill., and New York City before moving to Southern Pines two years ago. She had visited here frequently before coming here to make her home with her daughters, Mrs. Winkelman and Miss Powers.

Before Mrs. Powers was taken to the hospital, Miss Powers and her mother were living at the Winkelman home during the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Winkelman, who were spending the summer at Skaneateles, N. Y., arrived here by plane last Friday, accompanied by their farm manager, Edgar Daniels, and Mrs. Daniels. They returned to Skaneateles Wednesday.

Immediate survivors, in addition to Mrs. Winkelman and Miss Powers, are two grandsons, Dwight W. Winkelman, Jr., and Peter Winkelman.

Bragg Training Of Reservists Ends This Week

Summer training at Fort Bragg for reservists, National Guard soldiers, and ROTC cadets which has included more than 5,000 men since July 1, came to a close this week.

Fort Bragg has been host this summer to reservists from Connecticut to Florida and ROTC Cadets from colleges and universities along the eastern seaboard and Puerto Rico. All of the civilian soldiers who trained at Bragg were given expert instruction by regular Army personnel.

Brigadier General Oscar I. Wrenn, IV Corps Artillery Commander, upon the completion of his units' training, termed the cooperation by regular Army troops at Fort Bragg as "exemplary."

Lieutenant General A. R. Bolling, Commanding General, Third Army, visited the reservists undergoing training at Fort Bragg several times during the summer, and he praised the fine work being done by the reservists, saying that they are the real backbone of the Army.

E. C. Maness

Rites Held At Carthage Church

E. C. Maness, 61, died at his home in Carthage Tuesday morning. He is survived by his wife, the former Zulu Williams; four sons, E. C., Jr., and Lloyd T. of Charlotte, Laverne and William, both of Carthage; four daughters, Mrs. J. B. Ritter of Pinehurst, Mrs. J. B. McQuay of Charlotte, Mrs. J. H. Frye of Rockwell and Mrs. Melvin Vest of Sanford; five sisters, Mrs. Charlie Atkins and Mrs. Henry Myott, both of Carthage, Mrs. Virginia Saunders of Pinehurst, Mrs. W. C. Stout of Greensboro and Mrs. J. R. Powers of Sanford; three brothers, T. L. of Sanford, L. P. of Greensboro and Herman of Sanford; and 14 grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Thursday at 3 o'clock at Carthage Presbyterian Church, conducted by the Rev. W. S. Golden. Burial was in Cross Hill Cemetery.

Five Licensed As Practical Nurses

Five Moore County women have been licensed as practical nurses, after passing state board examinations. All completed two years of training activities at Moore County Hospital before receiving their license.

The group consists of three white women, Mrs. Carol West Cameron of Niagara, Mrs. Dorothy Graham Garrison of Pinehurst and Mrs. Minnie Crissman Culler of Manly; and two Negroes, Mrs. Annie Colton McLean of Pinehurst and Miss Lois McNair of West Southern Pines.
