Commissioners Favor Use Other Boarding Homes

Two problems that have occupied the attention of the county commissioners for several months -the fate of the county home and school financing—took up a large portion of the officials' time during their regular meeting at the courthouse in Carthage Monday.

Checking over their figures on the cost of renovating the county home so that it would be acceptable to the State Welfare department as a boarding home, the board came up with the same conclusion that followed their special meeting about the county home last week: the cost will run so high they don't think they can convert it with the amount appropriated in this year's budget.

The solution, which Chairman Gordon Cameron explained could not be listed as something final until all details are wound up, would be to move present inmates

Democrats To Rally of the county home to privately operated boarding homes elsewhere in the county. Negotiations for operation of these homes and all details for the transfer of inmates remain incomplete.

There is $15,000 in the budget for the county home this year, of which presumably some portion has been spent, since three months of the fiscal year have already gone by. Necessary renovations at the home would cost about $7,000. The remainder, Chairman Cameron said, would probably not be enough to finance the county's part in paying the upkeep of residents in the home if operated as a boarding home.

This, said Mr. Cameron, is the eason all of this year's appropriational County Democratic Executive reason all of this year's appropriation for the county home could not be used for renovations.
