SENATOR ERVIN PRAISES SCOTS HERITAGE

Bethesda Home Coming Draws Many To Church

Love of individual freedom, personal responsibility, belief in education and faith in God, such, according to Senator Sam J. Ervin, was the rich heritage bequeathed by the Scots to Moore County.

They were words to make proud the hearts of the descendants of the early settlers, come to the Home Coming at Old Bethesda Sunday to hear North Carolina's senior senator and take part in the annual gathering at the old church.

In the strong faces and lusty voices of the people, filling to overflowing the worn pews of the old sanctuary, with many seated outside under the trees, there was evidence of the truth of the speaker's words.

Once more the skirl of the pipes, calling to mind old legends and old memories, drew Scots and Presbyterians, Scots who were not Presbyterians, if there were any such, Presbyterians who were not Scots, and even some folks who were neither one, to the spot outside of Aberdeen, hallowed in the history of Moore County.

With the day grey and presaged by a slight early morning drizzle the crowd was, perhaps, not as large as on other occasions. However, most recalled the truth of the saying: "No matter how rainy it looks it never does actually rain, at least not during the lunch-hour on Home Coming Day. And most everybody came."

Scots Who Hae
Everybody that counted in the galaxy of Macs hereabouts was there. McLeods, McKinnons, Macneils, (also McNeils, MacNeilles, and Macneils, not to mention MacNeils) were there, Camerons, Campbells, Browns, Blues, Lamonts, MacCrimmons, Rays, Morrisons, Buchans, McKeithens—the rolls of Moore County Scots present stretched through the ranks of names that make up the history of Scotland.

Heading the ceremonies was J. Talbot Johnson of Aberdeen, chairman of the Session's Committee on the 1955 Homecoming, who has headed this group for many years, and Neill S. McLeod, chairman of the Deacon's Committee on Old Bethesda Church building and grounds.

The call of the church bell announced the morning service. Conducted by the pastor of Aberdeen Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Jack W. Ewart, the service included morning prayer offered by Dr. Marshall Woodson, president of Flora Macdonald College, and sermon by Dr. Walker Healy, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Fayetteville. Music was by the church choir and a choral group from Flora Macdonald College.

Followed the usual outdoor lunch, served under the trees, where fried chicken, country ham, deviled eggs, salad, pies and cakes of every size and beauty offered their temptations to the hungry, the greedy, the grateful, the pernickety, the Scot or the Sassenach; and Scots and non-Scots, Highlanders and Lowlanders, Campbells and the followers of the Bonnie Prince ate hearty together.

Gathering on the steps of the church after the lunch hour, the people heard Scottish airs played on the pipes by Vivien Morrison, piper and Highland dancer, and student at Flora Macdonald College.

Clan Donald
Afternoon speakers included, besides Senator Ervin, Major Reginald Henry Macdonald, representing the Clan Donald, of which many were present.

Major Macdonald, who is now an American citizen and lives in Pittsburgh, is engaged in organizing the Clan Donald, (or Macdonald) in the United States. As Tashachdoer, or high commissioner, to the Chief, Lord Macdonald of Skye, he told his audience, he is taking the lead in enrolling the Macdonalds throughout the nation into the ranks of the clan. He himself is a direct descendant of the Scottish heroine, Flora Macdonald, who led a group of Scots to North Carolina prior to the Revolution, and who, at one time, lived in Moore County, and may have worshipped at the Church at the Head of the Rockfish, the predecessor of Old Bethesda.

Introducing Major Macdonald was Donald Macdonald of Charlotte, member of the staff of the Charlotte News, who is head of the clan in the state. With him was Angus McBride, young Scotsman, in this country for a holiday and now visiting in Fayetteville. The remarks of Major Macdonald, telling of his work and the enthusiastic response which it was being given by Macdonalds everywhere, were followed by the address of Senator Ervin, in which the latter spoke with understanding and insight of the contribution of the Scots to the state. Senator Ervin was introduced by Moore County's representative to the state legislature, H. Clifton Blue of Aberdeen. Sharing in the gathering's enthusiastic welcome of the senator was Mrs. Ervin, who was in the audience. Also present and singled out for special welcome was the Rev. Charles Worth, former pastor of the Aberdeen congregation, who greeted the gathering from his seat in the gallery.
