Jack Garty hits golf balls too hard. Garty, who recently gave up golfing at the country club due to the "excessive timber" has been banned at a local driving range from hitting wood shots of any kind unless he brings his own clubs.

away his amateur standing. Grover is now a professional golfer working at Shaw Air Base in Sumter, S. C.

"It all happened so fast," said Charlie Clapp, of WEEB, "Grover shot a pair of 72's at the club and got so carried away that he decided to make golf a career." Herrmann spent part of his first week at the base driving balls down the 6,000 foot runway of the airfield trying to make good his lifelong ambition of "hitting one a mile." According to word received at this writing he still has not done it and is waiting for what he termed "the correct atmospheric conditions."

Maples Back
Pro Gene Maples returned from Camp LeJeune for a few days and easily defeated one of the clubs poorer tall golfers who wished to remain anonymous. Andy Page also played with Maples and scored a remarkable 70 despite a dislocated shoulder which kept drawing up near the end of the round.

First Time
Frank Buchan scored a two on the 445 yard sixth hole. It was the first eagle ever made on the tough par four. He hit the record setting shot with a two iron and the ball traveled more than 200 yards before settling into the hole.

Caddies Tournament
In the annual caddies tournament, George Turner scored a fine 78 on his second round. His first round score was not disclosed. More than 100 caddies and spectators turned out for the event.

Exit Quick
Otis Quick of Milo, Maine, has temporarily disappeared from the local scene. He was last seen on the fourth tee of the Sanford golf and country club. However it's expected he will return soon to pick up the manuscripts for his new book which are still with Roy Grinnell.

Duke Scholarship Won By Graduate Of Local School

William B. Warner of Southern Pines has been named one of five outstanding college students in the Carolinas to win regional scholarships to the Duke University Law School.

The awards, worth $1,000 each per year, are renewable for the succeeding two years of study if winners maintain high academic marks.

THEATRICALS CAROLINA

Coming — Thursday through Saturday at the Carolina Theatre, is "The Scarlet Hour," in Vista-Vision, featuring the new stars of the screen, Carol Ohmart, Tom Tryon, Jody Lawrence and James Gregory.

The big entertainment news Sunday through Wednesday, May 27-30, at the Carolina, is the movie debut of television comic George Gobel in "The Birds and the Bees." Lonesome George is rated a very funny man in the medium of video, hence his first opportunity to cavort in the vast reaches of the VistaVision screen is an eagerly awaited event.

A star-studded cast, lavish Technicolor production, and two of the year's best tunes are the solid accompaniment to Gobel's unique, laugh-provoking talents. Heading the parade of star talent are Mitzi Gaynor, David Niven, Reginald Gardner and Fred Clark with Harry Bellaver and Hans Conried featured.

Gobel's TV fans who come to see his first cinema outing will also be delighted to see the screen's fastest-developing musical star, Mitzi Gaynor, sing, dance and clown her way all over this lavishly mounted, broadly played comedy from Paramount. "The Birds and the Bees" is a new adaptation of "The Lady Eve" which was such a riot of fun with Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda back in 1941.

Starting Thursday night, May 31, is "Forbidden Planet" in CinemaScope and Eastman Color, starring Walter Pidgeon, Anne Francis, Leslie Nielsen and Warren Stevens.

Sunrise Theatre. "Jubal" stars Glenn Ford, famed for his work in "The Blackboard Jungle," Ernest Borgnine, voted "best actor" by the New York Critics for his performance in "Marty," and Rod Steiger, who won an Academy Award nomination for "On the Waterfront."

"Jubal" introduces two provocative newcomers, Valerie French and Felicia Farr. Filmed in CinemaScope and color by Technicolor, the emotion-powered drama features Basil Ruysdael and Noah Beery, Jr.

Based on a novel by Paul I. Wellman, "Jubal" was written for the screen by Russell S. Hughes and Delmer Daves; the latter also directed. William Fadiman produced for Columbia.

CINEMASCOPE 55—Twentieth Century-Fox, which three years ago introduced the revolutionary cinemascope, has again developed a new photographic technique called CinemaScope 55. It is being unveiled to the public in the motion picture "CAROUSEL" showing Sunday and Monday, May 27-28 at the Sunrise Theatre. The above photograph shows the greater efficiency of 55mm photography. It is acknowledged that 55mm is deeper, richer and clearer and carries four times more photographic information. (1) The images are radiantly bright and sharp and there is a greater feeling of audience participation than anything seen so far. (2) The backgrounds are as clearly in focus as the foregrounds. (3) The illusion of depth is greater and (4) There is no distortion. Every seat in the theatre becomes a perfect seat.
