

Girl Scout Day Camp Schedule Started Tuesday

Some 660 girls have been enrolled for the various day camps to be held throughout the Central Carolina Girl Scout Council, according to Cathryn Creasman, executive director.

The day camps are using as a theme "Good Manners In The Out-of-Doors" with special emphasis on campcraft skills. Particular skills to be stressed are out-door cooking, firebuilding, lashing, knot typing, First Aid, tent pitching and toolcraft. Each week a campcraft tournament will be held with units competing against each other.

The camp season opened May 29 and will close June 29. Camp schedules are as follows: first week, Angier; second week, Erwin; third week, Robbins and Southern Moore county, Pinebluff; fourth week, Dunn and Chatham county; and fifth week, Sanford and Lillington.

Troop Training
Fourteen Girl Scout leaders from the Council spent the weekend at the Pinehurst Girl Scout Cabin taking training for troop camping.

The following leaders were enrolled in the course: Southern Pines, Mrs. Marvin Wicker, Mrs. Maves McDonald, and Mrs. Jack Reid; Sanford, Mrs. Ken Harmon, Mrs. Tommy Mann, Mrs. J. C. Ellis, Mrs. C. T. German, and Madge Sanders; Lillington, Mrs. Casey Fowler and Mrs. T. H. Dean; Angier, Mrs. Leonard Ogburn and Mrs. R. A. Owens; Dunn, Mrs. Wesley Coats and Mrs. W. C. Armstrong.

The training was under the direction of Cathryn Creasman, executive director, and Sophia White, field director.

The leaders learned how to organize for troop camping, out-door cooking, types of fires, toolcraft, first aid, lashing knot typing, nature study, trail signs and how to conduct camp fires.

Rising world population and improved levels of foreign economic activity, accompanied by rising incomes abroad and better diets, indicate a favorable outlook for export of U. S. farm products.

State College Junior Held Here On Rape Charge

A preliminary hearing for Jack Key, 22, being held in Moore County jail on charges of assault and rape, will be held before Superior Court Judge W. A. Leland McKeithen at the courthouse Saturday morning.

Key, who lives in Robbins, is a junior at North Carolina State College. He is being held without bond pending the outcome of the hearing.

Key was arrested by members of the county sheriff's department Sunday on a warrant sworn out by Herbert Robinson of Montgomery County. He was charged with committing the offense, a capital crime, against Robinson's daughter, Martha Sue Robinson, also of Montgomery County.

Key has denied the charges. He was supposed to have had a hearing Tuesday but the prosecuting witness did not appear at that time. Judge McKeithen then moved the hearing to Saturday.

Key was supposed to have started his final exams Monday morning, he told officers.

D. W. Winkelman and son Peter, accompanied by Mrs. John C. Goodwin, Jr., and Miss JoAnne Goodwin, flew to Devon, Pa., in Mr. Winkelman's plane last Friday, where they joined Mrs. Winkelman and Miss Lee Powers, who had driven up on Thursday, to attend the Devon Horse Show. Peter, who was one of the exhibitors, won in the open jumping class for children under 18 on Saturday. The Goodwins, Miss Powers and Peter flew back to Southern Pines Sunday, but Mr. and Mrs. Winkelman remained.

Camellia flower buds are much more easily injured by cold than the plant itself and therefore the buds may drop prematurely after severe weather even if the plant itself shows no injury.

Last year's champion was Dr. A. M. Jenkins of Raleigh, who won the tournament held at the Southland Hotel here.

Thank You

I want to take this opportunity to thank all of the people of Moore County for their wonderful support of my candidacy as expressed at the polls last Saturday.

Every effort will be made by me to serve this district in a manner that will reflect with dignity and favor upon all the people.
