Annual Memorial Day Services Held Here Last Sunday

An impressive Memorial Day service honoring veterans of past wars was held at Mt. Hope Cemetery here Sunday at 5 p.m.

Participating in the ceremonies were Sandhills Post 134, American Legion, the Legion Auxiliary, the local post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and a detachment from the Air-Ground School.

Brig. Gen. Daniel W. Jenkins, commandant of the school, was principal speaker at the services. Gen. Jenkins' remarks are printed here in full:

"We are gathered here this afternoon to pay solemn tribute to those members of our armed forces who have made the supreme sacrifice for their country. On such an occasion, words are weak and futile except to reaffirm our admiration for the heroism of these dead.

"The heritage of freedom which they fought and died to preserve was dear to them. It is certain that could they counsel us they would pronounce it man's most priceless possession, one denied to so many peoples throughout the world.

"It is the aim of this nation to work for an honorable and lasting peace so that men will not be called upon to give their lives in battle. Unfortunately, the international climate of understanding and trust is not yet such that we can safely reduce our armed strength. It is our responsibility to these we honor, as well as to the living, to maintain a state of strength and readiness that will insure the peace, ultimately to see this condition supplanted by peace based on mutual trust and agreement rather than weapons.

"We shall press forward these aims with all our might and our prayers so that these who gave their lives shall not have died in vain."

During the ceremony a group of Boy Scouts from local troops served as honor guards at each of the veteran's graves in the cemetery. The scouts were under the leadership of Major Erskine B. Crew of the Air-Ground School.

Several ministers of churches in Southern Pines also took part in the services. A detachment from the Air-Ground School served as color guard.

Shields Cameron was in charge of the Memorial Day committee.
